have lacked for the Bulldogs after 40 minutes of play, but the constant pressure on offense in the second half opened the floodgates for three additional goals.

Senior midfielder Eric Romero extended the lead to two after beating his defenders and taking two touches inside the Fort Knox box before tapping a placed ball into the side netting.

Junior Christian Agüero concluded the scoring with a fourth goal in the 18th minute of the second half, intercepting a costly Fort Knox pass at the top of the box and ripping a low shot to the bottom left corner.

Both coaches described the game as an indicator of areas that need improvement.

"We've got a lot of work to do, but this matchup went a lot better than it has in the past, so I guess that's the silver lining," Stanley said. "We've got to get all these guys together and keep training to keep that progress moving for the next couple of weeks."

Ruiz made similar remarks.

"We've got certain positions that are inexperienced, and we've got kids stepping up for the first time, playing heavy minutes," Ruiz said. "Confidence is something we've really got to instill in these younger kids, because they're stepping into some big shoes from last year."

BOYKINS

(Boykins hasn't been available for interviews yet).

"He's got some traits to him that you can't coach," Barclay said of the Radcliff native. "I hesitate to draw comparisons a lot, but I think his athletic profile is very, very similar to (former U of L back) Isaac Guerendo. In the sense that he was a receiver in high school, kick returner, straight line guy, track guy, big speed, runs as fast as Guerendo, but is 212 pounds. He's got quads like Saquon Barkley. I mean, they're just bulging out of his pants. And he's got great hands coming from receiver, just like Guerendo did."

Brohm indicated that at this point, Boykins' switch to running back is just an experiment, but that he could wind up playing both positions this season.

"We want to make sure we have different ways to maybe just kind of get the ball in his hands," Brohm said. "So we're going to teach him the running back position a little bit, maybe over-emphasize that for a while, and then maybe he continues to do both, and see if we can find a way to get him on the field."

Louisville begins classes for the fall semester next Monday. The Cards may have a short scrimmage Wednesday, then end fall camp with a full scrimmage Saturday.

Jones reveals cancer diagnosis, credits experimental drug

OXNARD, Calif. — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones credited an experimental trial drug for successfully treating advanced melanoma as he disclosed his cancer diagnosis publicly for the first time.

Jones revealed his illness in a documentary, "America's Team: The Gambler and His Cowboys," which will debut on Netflix next week. The 82-year-old Jones then told The Dallas Morning News how he was initially diagnosed in June 2010 and underwent two surgeries on his lung and two on his lymph nodes over the next 10 years after skin cancer cells metastasized to other parts of his body.

"I was saved by a fabulous treatment and great doctors and a real miracle (drug) called PD-1 (therapy)," Jones said. "I went into trials for that PD-1, and it has been one of the great medicines. I now have no tumors."

First-year Cowboys head coach Brian Schottenheimer described Jones' fight with cancer as an "amazing story" and praised him for going public.

"I'm glad that Jerry shared it, just because I think it gives people hope," Schottenheimer said Wednesday. "It gives people the strength to say, 'OK,' you know, 'Hey, you can beat this.'"

Schottenheimer, 51, used his last news conference of the Cowboys' nearly monthlong stay in Southern California to talk about his own cancer diagnosis. He underwent surgery in 2003 for thyroid cancer at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Then-Washington Commanders owner Dan Snyder helped arrange Schottenheimer's treatment two years after firing his father, Marty Schottenheimer, as head coach. Brian Schottenheimer was Washington's quarterbacks coach during the 2001 season, the same year Snyder himself was treated for thyroid cancer.

"It doesn't discriminate against anybody," Schottenheimer said. "And mine was certainly less serious, but I was 28 when I was diagnosed with thyroid cancer. Nothing like Stage 4, nothing like what Jerry and other people have to go through. But you hear that word 'cancer,' and it scares the hell out of you."
