

250 Years of Clothing in Shelby County, Kentucky

The Shelby County Historical Society is pleased to announce the opening of its latest exhibit, 250 Years of Clothing in Shelby County, Kentucky. This special exhibit is filled with 30 mannequins displaying an array of clothing from the frontier settlement period through the current decade. You'll find men's and women's fashions that showcase 250 years of clothing from the Shelby County Historical Society (SCHS) collections and many loaned reproductions to give you a feel for each era represented.

Last year, the SCHS received a large clothing donation from members Beth and Ted Thomas. Several items are on display such as a green crepe beaded sleeveless dress (1920s "flapper" style), and a delicate Edwardian peach colored dress with a butterfly motif embellished with handmade lace, glass beads and sequined flowers.

The entire collection of about 40 pieces contained many children's items from the Ben Allen Thomas family, night gowns, purses, gloves, bonnets, pantaloons, and jackets. Many items belonged to Eliza J. Altsheler (1873 - 1956), who attended Science Hill Female Academy. Other items belonged to Emily Burch Altsheler Nichols (1900 - 1980). SCHS member Latisha Hays donated dresses and accessories from her great-grandmother, Harbison, and grandmother, Mafy Hays Harbison. This collection contains a black

Incorporated into the exhibit are uniforms from major military conflicts in which Shelby Countians served. From the SCHS collections are uniforms which belonged to WWI soldier Henry Abraham Rothchild and WWII veteran Lt. Guy Beard Lea. The Rothschilds were a significant part of the small Jewish community in Shelbyville that made up a large percentage of the merchant class, which sold clothing and accessories. Lt. Lea served in the U.S. Army Air Corps. You'll see Robert Foster Matthews Jr's U.S. Naval Officer Dress Blue Uniform and Margaret Hornback's WWII nursing uniform. Margaret served as a first-lieutenant general-duty nurse in the European Theater and helped set up hospitals in Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily, France and parts of Central Europe. There is also a section devoted to Shelby County school memorabilia.

Steve Abolt, a renowned historic tailor with a history of creating museum-quality garments, has loaned a variety of uniforms from the War of 1812 through the Mexican War. Recognized as an expert in U.S. military uniforming of the early republic period, Abolt has been replicating historical clothing for over 40 years. Abolt has numerous museum exhibits throughout the United States to his credit including Andrew Jackson's New Orleans uniform for the Historic New Orleans Collection, the uniform coats of William S. Hamilton in the Louisiana State Museum, Meriwether Lewis' dress uniform for the National Endowment for the Humanities, Dade Battlefield State Historic Site in FL, Tippecanoe Battlefield in IN, and The Alamo in San Antonio, TX, and he has dressed 19th mannequins for the U.S. Army Field Artillery Museum in Ft. Sill, OK.

Other lenders include: Brian Cushing, Museum Committee chair; his wife and exhibit consultant, Amy Liebert; Camp Nelson

National Monument; VFW Post 1179; Sarahbeth Farabee; and the Painted Stone Settlers, Inc.

The clothing in this exhibit is enhanced by the many artifacts in the SCHS collection, such as Native American tools from member Logan Brown.

This exhibit was funded by grants from the Kentucky Historical Society America 250 Kentucky and the Shelby

County Community Foundation. The free museum is open Wednesday - Friday, 10 am - 4 pm, and Saturdays, 10 am - 2 pm. Istanbulluoglu scores 18 points, No. 3 Louisville holds off No. 6 Alabama to reach Women's Sweet 16

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Elif Istanbulluoglu had 18 points and a key steal with 1:42 remaining that led to Reyna Scott's one-handed jumper as the shot clock expired, Imari Berry added two free throws with 8.2 seconds left and third-seeded Louisville held off No. 6 seed Alabama 69-68 on Monday in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

The Cardinals (29-7) reached their first Sweet 16 since 2023 despite several missed late free throws. Scott missed two with 2.3 seconds to go — the second of which Louisville coach Jeff Walz said was intentional — to give the Crimson Tide one last chance for a desperation basket despite having no timeouts.

Diana Collins grabbed the rebound and launched a shot from midcourt that bounced off the backboard, sending Louisville to a matchup Saturday against No. 2 seed Michigan in the Fort Worth 3 regional. The Cardinals will be making their 13th overall appearance in the Sweet 16.

"I thought it was in our best interest to miss and not give them an opportunity to set up a play to throw it down the floor," Walz said of the final sequence. "If she makes that shot, it's a tough way to lose, but I thought the odds were more favorable to do that."

Louisville's Sweet 16 quest required big plays with the Tide seemingly a basket away from changing the outcome. It also demanded resilience, and Cardinals players credited Berry for shaking off 1-of-7 shooting and the weight of the moment to sink both shots that provided the difference.

"We did a great job picking Imari up," said Istanbulluoglu, who made 7 of 11 from the field to offset 1-of-4 shooting at the line. "We're going to have ups and downs sometimes, shots aren't going to go in. It happens. ... She didn't quit."

Tajianna Roberts also scored 18 points, including four 3-pointers, while Laura Ziegler added 12 for Louisville, which won despite making 8 of 16 from the foul line and 7 of 26 from 3-point range.

Alabama freshman Ace Austin had 17 points, including five 3s, off the bench before fouling out late in the fourth quarter. The Crimson Tide shot 12 of 26 from behind the arc after attempting just 10 3s in their first-round victory over Rhode Island.

Collins finished with 14 points and Karly Weathers had 13, including a 3-pointer with four seconds left that got Alabama within one. The Tide outshot Louisville 46% to 45% but missed four consecutive attempts over the final 2 1/2 minutes, allowing Cardinals to grab a slight cushion.

"I think it's more what happened early in the game," Weathers said. "But also credit to Louisville. They just made plays down the stretch."

Every possession mattered in a game with 18 lead changes and eight ties, and Alabama made its presence felt from long range.

Collins' long-range shooting helped keep the Tide close. She went deep 4 for 5 times before going to the bench early in the fourth with her fourth personal foul and the Cardinals matching their biggest lead at 56-49.

DECIDING FACTORS
Both teams took 26 shots from deep and were nearly even from the floor. Louisville's 41-24 rebounding advantage — 14 offensive — resulted in a 14-7 scoring edge in second-chance points. Louisville also shot 12 more free throws than Alabama, which converted all four chances.
