the socks myself. You're pretty much useless at shopping."

"Hey, you shouldn't criticize someone until you've walked a mile in their shoes."

"Why?"

"Because you'll have their shoes and be a mile down the road. That's pretty funny isn't it Cindy?!? Cindy? Are you there Cindy?"

Cindy wasn't there anymore. We must have had a dropped call or maybe she just isn't a fan of Jack Handey quotes like that last one. I thought it would go over big time to a real shoe lover.

I don't want you to worry though. I made a command decision and bought three packets of socks for two son-in-laws and my son. I'm pretty proud of myself.

But just to be sure I added a chia pet to each as well.

Nothing says Christmas like a good chia pet.

Ring, ring, ring.

"Hello"

"Cindy, it's me Kenny."

"I know it's you. My nickname for you shows up on my cell phone when you call."

"Oh, what is my nickname? Is it something like honey bear, sweetie or lover boy?"

"I prefer not to say in case we ever end up in court. What do you want? I'm at work and it's busy."

"Fair enough. Well Cindy, it's about these socks you want me to get."

"Good grief, just get a package of socks for Will and Brenda and Renee's husbands. Surely you can do that?"

"It's not as easy as it sounds."

"Why not?"

"Well, for one thing there are three different
