Artifact theft by state park administrators from Blue Licks State Park reaches new level of criminal activity

The state-sponsored theft, of 274 Native American artifacts from the Pioneer Museum inside the Blue Licks Battlefield State Resort Park has been nearly completed, with state Parks Commissioner, Russ Meyer, signing his name to public records in which he falsely claims the standards of the federal NAGPRA (Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation law have been met (That is not true) and he has thus officially transferred ownership of the 274 artifacts to "The Shawnee Tribe."

The fact that a state administrator has again been part of fabricated non-truth in order to "steal" museum artifacts that have traditionally benefited the cultural identity and helped educate Kentucky tax Payers on the fascinating Native American history of northeast Kentucky is criminal within itself, added to that the fact that Meyer signed and sent the document to Tony Tipton a tribal historian with the Shawnee Tribe on June 24, 2024 is yet, another insult to those patriotic souls of the region who continue to try to halt the illegal action.

Meyer has totally ignored all attempts of communication from taxpaying citizens and media personnel to explain the motives and design for the three -year-long project that takes local treasures away from all Kentuckians and all of the Kentuckians of the future and provides nothing in return, except for more incompetence from the pusillanimous political parasites who have secretly undertaken the illegal project.

"Dear Ms Tipton," Meyer wrote to the Shawnee Tribal Historian located at 29 S. Hwy 69A Miami OKLAHO-MA, on June 24, 2024. "In accordance with the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act 9NAGPRA; U.S.C. 3001 et seq) and its implementing regulation (43 CFR part 10), this statement certifies the following:

The Pioneer Museum, Blue Licks Battlefield State Resort Park, Kentucky Department of Parks, relinquishes possession or control of the human remains and unassociated funerary objects listed in the attached Federal Register notices to the Shawnee Tribe."

Although Meyer quotes the federal regulation (43 CFR part 10) used as the standard to implement NAGPRA, he fails to mention that his actions as well as the actions of parks museum curator, Jennifer Spence, in illegally taking the artifacts is a clear violation of federal law.

The standards include the specific language that to confiscate Native American artifacts labeled as Unassociated Funerary Objects under NAGPRA, "The 274 cultural items described above are reasonably believed to have been placed with or near individual human remains at the time of death or later as part of a death ceremony and are believed, by a PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE, to have been removed from a specific burial site of a Native American individual."

But that condition was not met, according to public documents including emails to Tipton from Spence.

In a public record, in the form of a February 1, 2023, email from Spence to Shawnee Tribal Historic Preservationist, Tonya Tipton, Spence says that, "There are 60 pottery shards and pots on our list. Many are noted as coming from nearby Mason County (Fox field) but NONE ARE IDENTIFIED-HAVING BEEN REMOVED FROM A GRAVE SITE."

She then asks Tipton,

"Would you like me to include these in the notice as unassociated funerary objects?"

Tipton quickly replies, "Yes, you should include them all."

And Spence does include them all, and others, which certainly appear to fail to meet the basic requirements for repatriation.

It is the opinion of this reporter and many of the approximate 4,000 Kentucky tax payers who have signed petitions demanding the thefts of the artifacts stop; that Meyer, Spence and others should be indicted and criminally charged, for knowingly and purposefully violating NAGPRA laws.

Meyer ignores the facts and in his correspondence to Tipton dated June 24, 2024, he continues:

The Kentucky Department of Parks has no information about the human remains or cultural items being treated with pesticides, preservatives, or other substances that represent a potential hazard to the object(s) or to person(s) handling the object(s). Any information about these treatments was previously shared with the recipients. After sending this repatriation statement, the Kentucky Department of Parks will: 1. Consult with the parties above on custody and physical transfer, 2. Document any physical transfer, and 3. Protect sensitive information from disclosure to the general public to the extent consistent with applicable law. Nothing in the Act or this part limits the authority of the Kentucky Department of Parks to enter into any agreement with the requestor concerning the human remains or unassociated funerary objects. The Kentucky Department of Parks will send a copy of this repatriation statement to all parties identified above. Sincerely, Russ A. Meyer Commissioner Kentucky Department of Parks."

That document is signed by Meyer with carbon copies going to Melanie O'Brien, manager of National NAGPRA Program, Washington D.C.

On the federal form, Meyer and Spence provide the following:

"Pursuant to NAGPRA and its implementation regulations, and after consultation with the appropriate Indian Tribes, The Kentucky Department of Parks has determined that:

- The 274 cultural items described above are reasonably believed to have been placed with or near individual human remains at the time of death or later as part of a death ceremony and are believed, by a PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE, to have been removed from a specific burial site of a Native American individual.

- There is a relationship of shared group identity that can be REASONABLY TRACED BETWEEN THE CULTURAL ITEMS AND THE ABSENTEE-SHAWNEE TIBE OF OKLAHOMA."

In the Notice of intent document, Spence that the 274 artifacts as having been found decades ago, on private property in Mason County, by the 'Father of Blue Licks Park', William J. Curtis.

Of those 274 artifacts, Spence lists 61 pottery shards, 19 pottery vessels and 10 pipes as among the nearly 300 listed, which she says a, 'preponderance of evidence exists that proves beyond a reasonable doubt, that every single one was removed from a specific Native American, Fox Field burial.'

Spence is the public servant, who initiated, the selection and removal process, as a portion of her duties as curator for the Kentucky Department of Parks, under the supervision, and general guidance, of Kentucky Department of Parks Commissioner, Russ Meyer and Heritage Council Executive Director, Craig Potts. The removal process has been done as a result of blatant misinterpretation of recent revisions and more stringent implementation of the federal law, referred to as NAGPRA (Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act).

The selection for removal of the designated 274 Native Americans artifacts and proposed repatriation of those items to members of the Shawnee Tribe of Oklahoma, has been carried out thus far with a level of secrecy the likes of which have not been practiced from government officials since the height of World War Two.

The lack of governmental transparency exhibited as the process continues, has been disturbing for the local population, and media members, who continue to seek basic information from the public servants directly involved in the process and who are the sole possessors of the specific information used to determine the scope, reasoning and desired results, regarding the process.

Further, Meyer and his team of accomplices have met with elected officials such as Kentucky Senator, Steve West, representatives from US Senator, Mitch McConnell and local state representatives William Lawrence and Matthew Koch.

It was suggested during those meetings that future meetings be held in secrecy to discuss the controversy, which the secret meetings by design are un-American and violate open meetings Laws.

When this reporter was told about the possibility of such meetings he asked if a north Korean flag would be flying inside the room, since any such secret meetings were in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

This reporter received no intelligent response from any elected official. Those officials have said that Meyer and other preservation officials promised them that a public meeting would be held to answer all questions of the public and clarify the actions of state parks administrators.

That was evidently another lie perpetrated by Meyer and the rest of the state's history erasers and political parasites as no such meeting has materialized or been announced.

Meyer has refused to return phone calls and emails to dozens of citizens who have inquired to him about the state-sponsored theft of the artifacts, but did make a brief comment to journalist, Pat Conley, who writes for the Bourbon County Citizen newspaper.

In an article by Conley dated October 17, 2024, Meyer told Conley the artifacts in question were not donated but purchased from Curtis in 1949 for $15,000.

But Meyer fails to note that it was the tax-paying citizens of Kentucky, not any administrator in the park system, who fitted the bill for the artifacts!

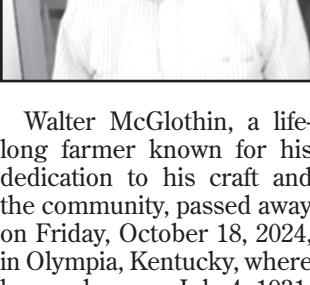

Meyer also comments about skeletons being dug by Curtis at Fox Field with artifacts, yet he fails to provide any evidence that most of the pilfered and pirated, 274 treasures were found in graves with Spence admitting in emails they have

No Proof of most of the artifacts coming from any Native Graves, which is clear violation of federal NAGPRA laws.

The sad saga continues.
