ECTC, KSU announce nursing partnership

A new RN-to-BSN pathway partnership between Elizabethtown Community and Technical College and Kentucky State University was made official last week.

ECTC nursing graduates will be able to pursue a Bachelor of Science in nursing through in-person support with both KSU faculty as well as ECTC faculty.

“We’re here for you all,” ECTC President and CEO Dr. Juston Pate said, looking at the nursing students seated in front of him. “This is an effort to invest in our students after they leave our college.”

Pate went on to say ECTC doesn’t just want success for the college, “we want success for your life.”

Collaboration between the two colleges will serve students attending the program through the Robbins University Center at ECTC, made possible by a $1 million gift from the late Dr. Bob Robbins and Rita Robbins, his wife.

“We wanted to do things just a little bit differently. ... We want this to be not an online factory of online programs,” Pate said. “It’s to provide that opportunity to continue to a relevant bachelor’s degree for this region to fill these jobs in our community.”

Perhaps it is the love of coaching youth sports that leads third-year nursing student Ethan Hall toward the goal of becoming a nurse practitioner.

Hall coaches his younger siblings in beginner and youth basketball and has Elizabethtown Community and Technical College President and CEO Dr. Juston Pate gives a sign of approval as Kentucky State University President Dr. Koffi Akakpo puts his signature on a partnership agreement between the two colleges adding a registered nurse-to-Bachelor of Science in nursing pathway. This new pathway allows nursing graduates to pursue a four-year degree through the Robbins University Center at ECTC.

spent some time on the tee-ball and softball diamond with them as well.

“This is definitely a huge thing,” Hall said about the partnership. “Now, my BSN doesn’t have to be completely online.”

Danny Range, currently working as a pharmacy tech at Baptist Health Hardin, has aspirations of becoming an ICU nurse. Range also is a third-year student at ECTC.

Range describes his journey as “quite a wild ride” transferring from a package handler for a pharmaceutical company, to one of their technicians, eventually to Baptist Health Hardin as a pharmacy tech.

It was “outside-the-box kind of thinking” Pate said that brought this idea together. In doing so, it required outside-the-box partners. Pate was happy to introduce his colleague and friend, KSU President Dr. Koffi Akakpo.

“I am a proud medical school dropout,” Akakpo said, sharing with the students all he ever wanted to be as a young boy was a doctor. “But then I went to medical school. I could not stand dead bodies. ... I cannot stand human blood.”

Every time Akakpo sees nursing students, he gives God glory there are those that can do what he was unable to do.

The RN-to-BSN pathway gives students access to both ECTC and KSU faculty to help students be successful achieving their bachelor’s degree.

Akakpo informed students if they are Pell Grant eligible, the pathway is tuition-free. Those not eligible for the Pell Grant will only pay ECTC tuition.

Once the BSN program is completed, students will have the option of continuing their education toward becoming medical doctors, in which KSU will pay up to $48,000.

“That’s absolutely huge, financially, because no one’s got that kind of money,” Hall said.

A lot of push from co-workers is what most encouraged

Range to pursue becoming a nurse.

“The people that I worked with, the inspiration that I’ve had from my co-workers, they’ve really guided me to be the best version of myself,” Range said.

This new partnership will assist Range in achieving his dream without having to study elsewhere to receive a BSN.

Hall had ambitions of becoming a doctor from the time he was a young boy. One semester at Defiance College in Defiance, Ohio, showed he wasn’t cut out for it so he fell on his back-up plan of becoming a nurse.

“I always thought nursing was my back-up plan ... but it turned out being the best plan I had,” Hall said. “I want to know at the end of the day, at the end of my life, what I’ve done has made a difference on other people.”
