For an election cycle several pundits have dubbed the most important of a generation, Hardin County voters turned out in record numbers for the 2024 General Election.

The general election has seen lines forming out the door at several of its 15 different polling centers across the Hardin County region for the roughly 89,000 registered voters.

"So we don't really know what the overall turnout is going to be," Hardin County Clerk Brian D. Smith said earlier Tuesday. "But given what we've seen in early voting, ... it wouldn't surprise me if Hardin County turns out at a higher percentage than ever before."

In early voting, Hardin County registered 15,566 voters took advantage of the early three-day voting. That's on top of the almost 1,700 voters who Carleigh Mattingly, a Glendale resident, came to play a part in the decision-making at all levels of government.

"I want to have a say in the leadership for the community, state and nation and this is my way to do it," Mattingly said. "I hope that we get candidates into offices that are going to bring our nation more together. They can stop the polarization and then push things forward to help with the well-being of everyone in our country."

E'town to lease building it once owned for city operations

BY GINA CLEAR

The city of Elizabethtown has entered into a lease agreement for a property it once owned.

After donating the former First Presbyterian Church to the Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame in 2014, the city now will lease the building from new owner Kevin Addington of Addington Properties for $5,000 a month.

The city entered into a fee simple title contract in November 2014 and gave the property adjacent to City Hall to the Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame Board. Addington purchased the property at 212 W. Dixie Ave. in August 2023 for $575,000, following the hall of fame's decision to vacate the property. In the same month, the city announced it would be moving its council meetings to use its chambers at city hall for additional workspace for a growing staff.

Addington allowed the hall of fame a year following the purchase before vacating the property.

Vine Grove prepares for improvements at water treatment plant

BY KODEE BRINEGAR

Vine Grove City Council was informed on the improvements underway for the Wastewater Treatment Plant at its monthly meeting Mon-

City Engineer Bob Woosley said they plan to complete the improvement in December, around Christmas time.

One of the biggest improvements is the new oxidation ditch, which is one of their primary sources of treatment.

"The oxidation ditch is going to add redundancy and help us increase our ability to treat at the sight," Woosley said. "The old ditch is going to be rehabilitated."

Other big improvement is the sledge processing building, where they will purchase a press that will process the sludge that will better fit the city's operations.

"Instead of the solids going to the land farming, as we do now, we're going to buy a piece of equipment that will press and dry material that can be used for fertilizer and many other beneficial reusable products," Woosley said.

Woosley said they also plan to improve on safety issues
