party no longer represents her values.

“It has become untenable and counterproductive to the best interests of my constituents for me to remain a Democrat,” she said, adding she plans to continue to be a “fearless advocate” for rural Kentucky and residents in the eastern part of the state.

Senate President Robert Stivers said in a statement, “On behalf of Senate Leadership and the entire Senate Majority, I welcome Sen. Robin Webb to our caucus. With her addition, the Senate Republican Caucus has reached a historic milestone of 32 members. This is a powerful sign that our proven approach to sound, conservative policymaking is winning hearts and minds across the state.”

Stivers said Webb’s policy record speaks for itself:

“Whether it’s her advocacy for Kentucky coal and our energy independence, her support for responsible budgeting, or her commitment to rural infrastructure, workforce development, and judicial matters, she has long worked alongside Republican colleagues to advance the interests of eastern Kentucky.”

This news is welcoming for Southcentral Kentucky Senators David Givens and Max Wise.

Both Wise and Givens serve in leadership positions currently.

President Pro Tempore Givens said, “Webb is well respected and will be an asset to our caucus. She has a background in agriculture and law, and she will emerge quickly as a leader among us.”

Wise shared in a social media post:

“Robin is an experienced and respected legislator who deeply understands this chamber’s operation,” Wise said. “She has regularly worked with our caucus members on the policies that have charted Kentucky’s course forward and will continue to do so.”

Wise, who is the Senate Majority Floor Leader, said he looks forward to working with Webb in the months ahead during the interim and during next year’s legislative session as Kentucky’s GOP Senate continues its mission to deliver thoughtful, conservative leadership from the Senate floor.
