Four Allen County-Scottsville graduates will be the first members of a new program designed to help aspiring students become teachers. This week, Allen County School officials announced the Grow Your Own Teacher program—a partnership with Western Kentucky University whose aim is to help Allen County graduates transition to teaching over the course of the next several years. The first program participants are, from left, Riley Roy, Kelsey Herrington, Jolene Williams, and Preston Wimpee.

AC-SHS graduate was a Dual credit and Early College participant and Teaching and Learning Pathway completer. Wimpee graduated in 2022 and is a current paraprofessional basketball coach at AC-SHS. He plans to pursue certification in Exceptional Child Education. Williams was a 2023 AC-SHS graduate who was a Teaching and Learning Pathway completer and a dual credit student.

“These individuals represent the best of Allen County—committed, capable, and eager to give back to the schools that shaped them,” Cosby noted. “We look forward to watching them grow as educators and impact the next generation of students.”

Cosby added “the Grow Your Own initiative is a key part of our long-term vision to invest in our local talent, promote career pathways in education, and ensure our students are served by teachers who are deeply rooted in our community.” For additional information or to schedule interviews with program leaders or apprentices, please contact Cosby at joseph.cosby@allen.kyschools.us.
