

Pathways to Purpose: Inspiring the Innovators of Tomorrow

Special to the Enterprise

Harlan County Schools invites students and families from across the region to take flight into the future during Pathways to Purpose: Aviation and Engineering Edition on Thursday, November 20, at James A. Cawood Elementary School. This highly anticipated STEM experience will be held in two sessions — from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. and again from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. — giving families multiple opportunities to explore exciting, hands-on learning. Hosted by Harlan County Schools and made possible through the partnership of The Lighthouse Beacon Foundation, The Be Elite Foundation, and Stay Plugged In, this event will immerse students in the world of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics through interactive stations and real-world demonstrations. Participants will have the chance to:

- Pilot flight simulators
- Navigate a drone obstacle course
- Build with LEGO engineering and computer science challenges
- Experience shoutcasting and streaming setups
- Take on the classic egg drop competition
- Learn from professionals during a mentorship panel
- Explore many other engaging STEM activities

“This event gives our students the chance to shape the technology of tomorrow through the STEM of today,” said Greg Longworth, Harlan County Schools Math Resource Teacher. “We’re empowering the students of today to be the innovators of tomorrow. We are so appreciative of the organizations who are making this possible for our community. This is something you don’t want your school-age child to miss.” Longworth added, “I’m reminded of the quote, ‘Don’t be afraid to be the only one in the room, but be the first so others can follow.’ We want our students to have the courage to lead, to explore, and to inspire others to join them on their journey toward success.”

Harlan County Schools Superintendent Brett Johnson praised the event as an example of the district’s commitment to connecting learning with the future world of work. “Pathways to Purpose is more than a STEM event — it’s an investment in our students’ futures,” said Johnson. “When young people have the opportunity to explore and interact with real-world technology, it sparks a curiosity and excitement that traditional learning can’t always inspire. We’re grateful to our partners who are helping us provide these transformative experiences that show students the incredible possibilities waiting for them right here in Appalachia and beyond.” Throughout the evening, students will rotate between stations to gain hands-on knowledge and exposure to a variety of STEM career paths. “We hope this experience creates curiosity — the spark that inspires students to pursue a STEM future,” Longworth said. The event is free of charge and open to all area students and their families. A team of highly trained STEM volunteers will guide participants at each station, sharing their expertise and enthusiasm for these fast-growing fields. Come see what’s possible when creativity meets technology — and discover how today’s curiosity can lead to tomorrow’s innovation.

N. American International Livestock Exposition begins 52nd Chapter

News release

As fall settles across the Bluegrass, a familiar rhythm begins at the Kentucky Exposition Center with the start of the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE). Showcasing a record-breaking number of entries, the internationally attended event runs through November 20. With 1,800 more entries than 2024, NAILE will feature nearly 27,000 livestock entries across a variety of species, including cattle, goats, sheep, swine, and more. “Today, we welcome thousands of exhibitors, their livestock, and their competitive spirit to Louisville, Kentucky,” said David S. Beck, President and CEO of Kentucky Venues. “We’re thankful to see record growth and interest in our exposition. At this cornerstone event, we will showcase the best of the breeds on our iconic green shavings, recognize individuals in the industry who dedicate their livelihood to the betterment of agriculture and others, while facilitating our mission of developing the next generation of leaders who will shape our future.” While NAILE remains rooted in tradition, the show continues to evolve. Visitors will notice Kentucky Venues is in the midst of a major expansion and renovation project, which included the demolition of Newmarket Hall, long known for hosting livestock sales during NAILE. This year, sales will be moved throughout the facility, including at the Hitching Post, which will also serve as an entertainment tent featuring live music and food on select days. The excitement extends beyond the show rings as Freedom Hall comes alive from November 13-15 with the North American Championship Rodeo Presented by Rural 1st®. Before and after the rodeo, visitors can explore the North American Country Store, featuring more than 100 vendors, or enjoy live country music and Kentucky cookin’ at the Hitching Post. Headlining acts include Chancey Williams, Alex Miller, The Kentucky Headhunters, Soul Circus, and more, taking the stage November 13-18.
