One hundred years.

That's the total number of years that Nolan Group Media has been in operation, and the Kentucky State Senate recognized the century milestone on February 26.

Senate President Robert Stivers, a Republican elected to serve in Clay County, Kentucky, delivered the resolution on the Senate floor.

The American Dream, a phrase rooted in the fabric of America emphasizing the freedom and opportunity to achieve success, is one of which the late James Frank Nolan seized in 1925 when he embarked on a newspaper career journey, ultimately leading to what is known today as the Nolan Group Media.

The Clay County native's media enterprise would ultimately turn into a constellation of newspapers and related businesses dedicated to serving communities, highlighting its dedication to ensure accurate and honest reporting on
