that he wanted it to be a larger scale, several day event to raise awareness, with several events surrounding the 5K.

"You can walk, you can use a stroller, if you need to use a wheelchair, that's a place that you can do that, or you can run in it," Hoskins explained. "All of our proceeds are going to go toward suicide prevention."

Hoskins explained that on the national level, 22 veterans take their own lives each day, and that raising awareness to help those in need

"I know of three incidents in the last two years where veterans have thought about committing suicide, and we've been influential in getting them the help they need so that that never happened," Hoskins stated. "That's a good

"It's essentially a 5K," Porter explained. "It's the entirety of our current trail construction, with a couple of detours not taken. Unfortunately, we're not going to have people run and pass the cave entrance, or because they're going down further off the extended nature
