

Is it time to see an audiologist?

BY TREY CLINE

University of Kentucky

When you think about getting your health checked, you probably think of visiting a primary care doctor or dentist. But have you ever thought about your hearing? If you’ve noticed changes in how you hear or experience things like ringing in your ears or dizziness, it may be time to visit an audiologist.

What is an audiologist?

An audiologist is a licensed healthcare professional who specializes in evaluating, diagnosing and managing hearing and balance disorders. Audiologists work with patients of all ages, from newborns to older adults, and play an essential role in helping people stay connected to their world through better hearing and communication.

Audiologists can:

- Complete comprehensive hearing tests to assess the type and degree of hearing loss
- Recommend appropriate intervention options such as hearing aids, cochlear implants, and/or assistive listening devices
- Complete advanced testing to assess and manage balance disorders related to the inner ear
- Fit and manage hearing aids, cochlear implants, and assistive listening devices

- Diagnose and manage tinnitus (ringing or buzzing in the ears)
- Offer counseling and education for patients and families
- Provide hearing protection and preventative care for those at risk of noise-induced hearing loss

How do I know if I need to see an audiologist?

Hearing loss is often gradual and many people may not notice the signs right away. Here are some common symptoms that may indicate it is time to schedule an evaluation with an audiologist:

- You frequently ask people to repeat themselves
 - Conversations are hard to follow, especially in noisy environments
 - You think others are mumbling or speaking too softly
 - You need to turn up the volume on the TV or radio
 - You hear a ringing or buzzing sound (tinnitus) that nobody else hears
 - You feel off balance or dizzy, especially when standing or walking
 - You avoid social situations because it's hard to hear or keep up
- Even children can benefit from audiologic care. If your child isn’t meeting speech and language milestones, doesn’t respond to their name, or has frequent ear infections, an audiologist can help determine if hearing is part of the issue.

Why hearing health matters

Hearing is critical to communication, relationships, learning, and safety. Untreated hearing loss has been linked to social isolation, depression, and even cognitive decline in older adults. The good news is that early intervention can improve quality of life and overall well-being.

What to expect at an audiology appointment

A typical visit with an audiologist includes a detailed conversation about your hearing history, symptoms, and lifestyle needs. You’ll undergo a comprehensive audiologic evaluation (hearing test) in a sound-treated booth to determine your hearing sensitivity. Based on the results, the audiologist will discuss management options — whether that’s hearing aids, a cochlear implant evaluation, medical referral, communication strategies, or simple hearing protection tips.

your health, an audiologist can provide the answers and support you need. Just like eye exams and dental visits, hearing check-ups should be part of your routine health care, especially as individuals age or have been regularly exposed to loud environments.

Langefeld to become new commissioner public health

BY MELISSA PATRICK

Kentucky Health News

Gov. Andy Beshear announced Tuesday, June 17, that Dr. John Langefeld will become the new commissioner of the Kentucky Department for Public Health on July 1.

Langefeld succeeds Dr. Steven Stack, who will transition to his new role as the Cabinet for Health and Family Services secretary on July 1.

“Team Kentucky believes that health care is a basic human right – one which Dr. Langefeld has dedicated his life to,” Beshear said in a news release. “With his wealth of experience and proven commitment to the health and well-being of Kentuckians, I am confident that Dr. Langefeld will help us build on our efforts to keep Kentuckians informed, healthy and safe.”

Langefeld currently serves as the medical director for Health Insights and Innovation at CHFS. The release notes that he has more than 30 years of health care leadership experience, including having served as the chief medical officer of the Kentucky Department for Medicaid Services.

“I am honored to continue serving Kentucky in this critical capacity. My focus will be on shifting our focus upstream, from not only treating illness but nurturing health and well-being,” Langefeld said in the release. “This means enhancing social supports, expanding mental health resources, prioritizing preventive screenings, enhancing health policy through community engagement, and innovative, data-driven strategies. Our true measure of success will not just be the treatments we deliver, but how the people in our communities grow healthier, stronger and more resilient.”

KDPH is responsible for developing and operating state public health programs and activities for all Kentuckians. Its mission is to “improve the health and safety of people in Kentucky through prevention of negative health outcomes, promotion of healthy lifestyles and protection from diseases, injury and environmental health impacts,” according to the release.

“Our work is about real people, with real lives, whose stories intersect at the crossroads of policy and practice,” said Langefeld.

“When we align our efforts around true health, rather than isolated programs, we can deliver life-changing outcomes for every Kentuckian. My ‘why’ is simple: I believe in Kentucky, in our people, in the power of shared purpose, and the promise of collective action. Together, let’s ensure every heartbeat in our commonwealth resonates with vitality and hope.”

According to the release, Langefeld is a native Kentuckian and earned his medical degree from the University of Louisville School of Medicine after graduating from Berea College with a bachelor’s degree in biology. He completed his residency in family medicine at St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Edgewood. He is a diplomat of the American Board of Family Medicine.
