Ridley played in only five games in 2021, when he posted on social media he needed "to step away from football at this time and focus on my mental well being." He was suspended for the 2022 season for placing bets on games in 2021.

He was traded to Jacksonville late in 2022 before finding a new home with Tennessee, where he agreed to a four-year, $92 million deal before the 2024 season.

When asked Tuesday about his decision to "step away" from football at the end of his time in Atlanta, Ridley said "I was injured."

"That's why I was going through what I was going through, OK," Ridley said. "When you're injured and they want you to be really good, it's not easy. So that was what I was going through."

Ridley has had back-to-back 1,000-yard seasons with the Jaguars and Titans and, at 30, is a veteran for a Titans offense looking to rebuild behind Ward, the No. 1 overall pick in this year's draft.

Falcons second-year coach Raheem Morris was the team's wide receivers coach when Ridley was drafted. Morris served three seasons as the Los Angeles Rams' defensive coordinator before he was hired as Atlanta's coach last year.

"I was a Calvin Ridley fan when I left, I was a Calvin Ridley fan when I was gone and I'm a Calvin Ridley fan now," Morris said Tuesday.

The Titans and Falcons will have another joint practice on Wednesday season game on Friday before playing a pre-night.
