The ACC Tournament is scheduled for March 10-14 at the Spectrum Center in Charlotte.

CBS Sports had earlier reported the ACC was strongly considering reducing its conference slate to 18 games to allow teams to schedule more marquee non-league games to improve the conference's chances of earning more at-large bids in the NCAA Tournament

The ACC played an 18-game league schedule as recently as the 2018-19 season before expanding to 20 games in 2019-20 to fill airtime with the launch of the ACC Network in the fall of 2019.

This past season, only four ACC teams made the Big Dance, with North Carolina needing to win a play-in game.

That was the lowest percentage (22.9%) in its history and the Tar Heels were a controversial choice because of their 1-12 record against Quad 1 teams.

All but one of the ACC teams were eliminated in the first round, including No. 8 seed Louisville, which was beaten by No. 9 Creighton. Duke advanced to the Final Four, losing in the semifinals to Houston.

The ACC had opportunities to improve its resume last season but went 2-14 against the SEC and was ranked dead last among the Power 5 conferences by KenPom.com and in most other ratings.

"As a league, if you don't have a great out-of-conference (record), then mathematically you can't move up," Miami athletics director Dan Radakovich told CBS Sports.

"Your conference (ranking) is pretty much set once you get to January."

The ACC has placed five or fewer teams in the NCAA Tournament in four straight seasons, the conference's worst stretch since the early 1980s.

Still, five ACC clubs have reached the Final Four during that time, making it the only league with semifinal appearances in the last four years.

The four-year low has come during an unusually high number of retirements and departures, including several current and future Hall of Fame coaches at blue-blood programs responsible for 5,488 career victories: Mike Krzyzewski (Duke), Roy Williams (North Carolina), Jim Boheim (Syracuse), Mike Brey (Notre Dame), Tony Bennett (Virginia), Jim Larranaga (Miami) and Leonard Hamilton (Florida State).

Those coaches accounted for 10 national championships and 30 appearances in the Final Four.
