WILDLIFE

after graduation.”

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife provides public access to nearly 1.7 million acres across 136 public land areas to conserve fish and wildlife resources and provide public access. Because the agency owns only a small fraction of the total of these public access lands, partnership agreements make most of it possible. This is the first such property in Whitley County.

“It is exciting to think of how this partnership will allow us to manage and conserve this property in a way that can benefit our students and the community for years to come,” said Travis Wilson, Executive Vice President for Operations at the University.

The University of the Cumberlands’ WMA includes parts of the Cumberland River watershed, featuring mostly forested and moderate to steep terrain. The property offers large tracts of land with mature forest, as well as reclaimed surface-mined land covered with shrubs and grasses. Together, these tracts afford diverse habitats for a wide-range of wildlife species.

According to the WMA agreement, hunting for deer, bear, and coyote will be limited to archery only. All other game species may be hunted under statewide regulations in effect for the applicable county. The WMA agreement prohibits these activities: nighttime hunting, horseback riding, off-road driving, target shooting, baiting or feeding, and commercial guiding.

Updated WMA information, regulations, and maps are available on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website's Public Lands Search page. Type “University of the Cumberlands WMA” in the search box in the top right corner of the fw.ky.gov homepage.

University of the Cumberlands is the largest private university in Kentucky and one of the fastest-growing private doctoral universities in the nation. With its main campus in Williamsburg and a campus in Florence in northern Kentucky, the university offers more than 40 undergraduate, graduate, and executive programs to students from all over the world. Rooted in Christian values such as leadership through service, Cumberlands aims to make higher education affordable and accessible to all.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife’s mission is to conserve, protect, and enhance the fish and wildlife resources of the commonwealth and provide outstanding opportunities for hunting, fishing, trapping, boating, shooting sports, wildlife viewing, and related activities. For more information regarding hunting and fishing or learning to hunt and fish, visit the department’s website at fw.ky.gov or call 1-800-858-1549, 8 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. (ET) on weekdays, excluding holidays
