currently living at the Lake Jericho campgrounds.

According to the Henry County Fiscal Court website, recurring flooding damaged thousands of acres of cropland in Henry and Trimble Counties in the late 1950's. The town of Sulphur was underwater, and many homes were lost. The Henry and Trimble County Conservation Districts worked with the fiscal courts in each county and the Soil Conservation Service to develop a project that would protect residents in this watershed from future damage. A board of directors was formed from landowners within the watershed to oversee the activities. Under SCS's PL-566 program, five flood retarding structures were installed throughout the watershed for a cost of $1.7 million. One of those structures, Lake Jericho, was also designed as a recreation area.

Lake Jericho opened for business on July 25, 1969, and over the years has offered fishing, camping, shelters with bathrooms, outdoor picnic areas with grills and hiking trails.

An advertisement will be placed in the Henry County Local and the Trimble Banner between 21 and seven days before the bidding process ends.
