drove a riding mower too close to the edge of a small stream that flowed through his property at 12595 Highway 30 West. The lawnmower dropped over the bank and rolled over on top of Noble, pinning him under the machine in the creek.

Witnesses at the scene reported to E-911 in Hazard that he was in the creek, but his head was above water.

Members of the Jackson and Canoe Fire Departments responded with police officials and ex-tricated Noble from under the mower. Paramedics from Breathitt-Wolfe Ambulance Service, south of Wal-Mart, as officials conducted a “controlled burn.”

The burn was approved by Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) officials to eliminate a large pile of trees, brush, limbs, and other plant matter hauled to the site during the February 2025 flooding.

Burning natural debris on site helps the county avoid expensive haul costs associated with moving and disposing of the materials. The practice, approved by federal officials, also helps prevent the spread of several invasive species that may be found in the trees.

Another fire at the FEMA dump site on April 21 was not planned and resulted from the actions of an arsonist.

By Tuesday afternoon, most of the large wood conformity with the regulatory basis of accounting, which is an acceptable reporting methodology. This reporting methodology is followed for all 120 clerk audits in Kentucky. Finding: The clerk’s office has poor internal controls over the receipts and disbursements ledgers Segregation of duties and compensating controls were not effective. The fourth quarter report included posting errors that resulted in 14 adjustment recommendations to the receipts ledger, nine adjustment recommendations to the disbursements ledger, and an overstated quarterly report. Controls weren’t in place to prevent erroneous transactions and transactions from other years from being posted to the 2023 ledgers. The receipts and disbursements on the fourth quarter report, presented to the Department for Local Government, were overstated by $76,259. Recommendations: We recommend the county clerk institute controls and front expected to drop into the Ohio River Valley. The outage comes as concerns mount due to recent Trump Administration cuts to the National Weather Service. According to one report, the Jackson Weather Office, located at the Julian Carroll Airport, is operating on a reduced staff.

Reports indicate that during periods when no severe weather is expected, there is only one staff member during the evening hours and none overnight

As the outage continued, a NWS spokesman shared an access link to the radar data about 3:30 p.m. on Monday with the public through its website.

No announcement had been made about the restoration of access to the radar data at press time.
