City Council hears clean audit, advances gas projects and grant applications

By Mig Feuser

The Columbia City Council met Monday evening for its regular called meeting, addressing financial oversight, infrastructure needs, school safety arrangements and several funding applications tied to state and federal programs.

Jenna Glass of Campbell, Myers, and Rutledge, PLLC presented the city's annual audit. Glass reported that the City of Columbia received an excellent audit, with no negative findings. She noted positively the city's success in applying for and receiving grant funding and other federal assistance, citing those efforts as a strength reflected in the financial review.

Council next opened bids for the purchase of a dump truck to be used by the City Gas Department. One bid was received, from Don Franklin Ford, and council accepted the bid.

Police Chief Evan Burton updated council on changes to the School Resource Officer agreement. Effective January 1, 2026, the City of Columbia will provide SRO coverage for the Adair County Primary Center and Adair County High School. Under the revised arrangement, the Adair County Sheriff's Department will assume responsibility for the Adair County Middle School and Adair County Elementary School.

Council then entered a brief executive session. No action was taken following the closed portion of the meeting.

A first reading was held on a new ordinance adjusting garbage rates for the sanitation department. City officials explained that the proposed changes are necessary due to increased costs implemented by the transfer station.

Council also voted to proceed with action related to the Synergy Food Group building contract. Any correspondence regarding the matter is to be forwarded directly to City Attorney Mike Harris.

Several funding-related actions followed. Council approved authorizing the mayor to sign documents for Government Resources Accelerating Needed Transformation (G.R.A.N.T.) funding, tied to an application submitted through the United States Department of Transportation's Transportation Alternative Program.

Council further authorized the mayor to submit applications through the Kentucky Economic Development Cabinet and the State of Kentucky for gas line improvements along Industrial Park Road, identifying the project as a priority infrastructure need.

Before adjournment, Mayor Pamela Hoots announced that a public hearing will be held Tuesday, January 20, regarding a Community Development Block Grant application for Community Economic Development.

City Gas Superintendent Jerry Watson and Terry Moore of Columbia Parks and Recreation were in attendance at Monday night's meeting, where several gas-related projects and items were discussed.

Drew Conn, Assistant Chief of Police, Sgt. Jay Wilson and Police Chief Evan Burton attended Monday's City Council meeting. Assistant Chief Conn provided an update on the Columbia Police Department's shooting range, while Chief Burton addressed changes to the School Resource Officer contract, under which two officers will be funded jointly by the city and the county.
