Hogsett seeks donations to help students buy books

Submitted

DANVILLE, Ky. — Mary G. Hogsett Primary School is seeking donations to help students purchase books during its Scholastic Book Fair, scheduled for Oct. 19-23.

The school is inviting local businesses to contribute through Share the Fair, Scholastic’s giving program for children who need financial assistance buying books. Contributions can be made through the school’s book fair website through Oct. 18.

Tabitha Anderson, the school’s library media specialist, is coordinating the appeal, which aims to give more students the opportunity to bring books home and develop a lasting interest in reading.

“You’re helping to create an inclusive community where every kid can start the journey to becoming a lifelong reader,” Anderson wrote in a request for support.

According to the school’s donation information, a contribution of $35 supports one student, while $75 supports two students. Larger contributions of $1,000 support an entire classroom, and $5,000 supports a whole grade.

The giving program allows businesses to support students directly by helping cover the cost of books they select during the fair.

Contributions can be made at bookfairs.scholastic.com/bf/maryghogsettprimaryschool. Additional information about Share the Fair is available at s-bf.com/share.

For questions about supporting the school’s book fair, contact Anderson at tabitha.anderson@danville.kyschools.us.
