Daniel Morford, Sr.

Private Daniel Morford, Sr. was the second great-grandson of John Morford/Mofford, who was born in 1623. He was recorded as the first Morford/Mofford immigrant to America.

Daniel was born in 1741. He married Rachel Dye on May 7, 1764 in New Jersey. Daniel was age 36 when he enlisted in the American Revolutionary War army in Washington County, Maryland on November 4, 1776 as a militia soldier. His service was in the Middlesex County Militia as a Private in New Jersey 1st Regiment. The term "Jersey Blues" was coined to describe the uniforms these soldiers wore.

He described himself as being engaged in fighting and disarming the Tories. He served as mounted guard at Woodbridge, Amboy, and Brunswick at Bargin Point and Trenton. He later marched to New York and was placed at Long Island. He was on guard duty at New York when the British set fire to that city.

After Long Island, Daniel marched to Fort Washington, where he fell into the hands of the British. As a prisoner of war, he was held captive for four days with nothing to eat. He made his escape to the American army with the aid of General Putnam. Daniel continued serving until the close of the year 1778

It is believed that Daniel and Rachel had 9 children. His son, John D. Morford, is buried in Maple Grove Cemetery. They moved to Kentucky in the area that is now Mason & Bracken County, Kentucky. The family donated land for the Germantown Christian Church in 1826. Daniel stated in his pension application of 1833 that he lived in Bracken County, Kentucky about forty years before moving to Brown County, Ohio in 1827.

He died on July 1, 1833 at age 92 in Brown County, Ohio. Neither the DAR nor the State of Ohio has record of his burial place. It could be that his body was brought back to Kentucky and interred in a family cemetery near Locust Creek in Bracken County, Kentucky. That cemetery has since been destroyed.

New Year's Resolutions: Super Success Strategies

Submitted by Bryan Golden, the author of "Dare to Live Without Limits"

Almost 90% of Americans will make at least one New Year's resolution. Less than 20% will succeed in accomplishing even one.

The beginning of the year is a great time for life improving resolutions. Common resolutions include losing weight, giving up smoking, maintaining a budget, saving money, finding a better job, getting healthier, becoming more organized, and spending more time with family.

Whatever your resolutions, here are some specific strategies to help you succeed. First and foremost is to take the first step, which is to start. Without action, there will be no success. Action creates results. Intention alone will not work.

Have written goals stating what you want to accomplish. If you want to lose weight, how much and by when? If you want to live within a budget, what is the amount? If you want to continue your education, what school will you go to and which classes will you take?

Take small but consistent steps. Habits are formed by frequent repetition over time. Change

Don't try to change too many things at once or you risk becoming overwhelmed and discouraged. You can have your resolutions. If you were successful yesterday, fantastic, keep going. If yesterday was a disappointment, today is a new chance to make progress. Replace the word "try" with "will." Do whatever it takes to get the results you want.

Believe in yourself and your ability to change. Change can feel difficult, uncomfortable, or painful, but you can do it. Become determined to succeed. Don't procrastinate. Although doing nothing is often an appealing alternative, it leads to frustration.

Each day is a new opportunity to work on
