check stations in each of those four counties. Hunters will need their Telecheck confirmation number, license information and harvest location (see the note below).

Voluntary sampling: In CWD Surveillance Zone counties other than those four counties, Kentucky Fish and Wildlife staff will be at various processors during weekends of the modern firearms season asking hunters for voluntary samples.

Outside the CWD Surveillance Zone, testing is free and voluntary. Hunters can have their deer tested by dropping off its head at a CWD Sample Drop-off Site or by requesting a CWD Sample Mail-in Kit. Hunters who submit a head or sample for CWD testing using these two methods will be entered into the Shoot for Samples giveaway.

Hunters should be aware that they will need to provide a general harvest location when taking a deer for CWD testing. This information is critical for monitoring CWD over time and will not be shared publicly. The information is general in nature – i.e. a one-mile-square box on a grid – and thus won't identify any hunter's "spot."

Hunters can find the grids online ahead of their hunt on the Know Before You Go webpage. To find their hunting spot, hunters can either type the address or enlarge the map, then click on that location. The grid ID appears as a seven-character number that includes two letters and five numerals. Hunters can also find their grid number using the KY Deer & Elk App available on Apple and Android.

For questions or to get more information about CWD, go online at the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Chronic Wasting Disease webpage or contact the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Information Center by emailing info.center@ky.gov or calling (800) 858-1549 during office hours, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. (Eastern) weekdays.

The public can report sick or dead deer (and elk) by filling out an online form at Report Wildlife Disease or by contacting the Information Center.
