Drivers urged to celebrate July 4 responsibly

KENTUCKY
TRANSPORTATION CABINET
OFFICE OF HIGHWAY SAFETY

Team Kentucky reminds all Kentuckians to drive sober and celebrate responsibly this Independence Day to keep everyone safe on the roads. Drivers are encouraged to make plans early for a sober ride home and should expect an increased law enforcement presence during the holiday weekend to prevent drunk driving crashes, as even one drink can impair a driver's ability to safely operate a vehicle.

"As we celebrate this holiday weekend, we encourage everyone to make smart decisions so we can keep Kentucky's roads safe for everyone," said Gov. Andy Beshear. "Drive sober, look out for your friends and family, and help anyone who has been drinking find a safe way home."

Alongside the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Kentucky Transportation

Cabinet officials are reminding drivers to "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" and remember that "Buzzed Driving Is Drunk Driving."

According to Kentucky State Police crash records, last year there were 55 crashes involving a drunken and/or drugged driver over the Fourth of July holiday period, resulting in 30 injuries and three deaths.

As part of a nationwide initiative, the Kentucky Office of Highway Safety (KOHS) is coordinating with local and state law enforcement agencies to increase high-visibility patrols and sobriety checkpoints throughout the holiday period. KOHS also provides a checkpoint truck equipped with testing equipment and a checkpoint trailer for use by law enforcement partner agencies.

"You might feel okay to drive, but even a small amount of alcohol or drugs can impair your ability to drive safely, think clearly or react quickly," said Transportation Secretary Rebecca Goodman. "Don't take the risk of putting yourself and others on the road in danger."

To prevent tragedies, follow these recommendations:

Before the festivities begin, plan to get home safely at the end of the night.

If you're impaired, use a ride-booking company, taxi, call a sober friend or family member, or use public transportation to get home safely.

If you see an impaired driver, safely pull over and contact law enforcement. You may dial the Kentucky State Police's toll-free line at 800-222-5555 or call 911.

If you know people who are about to drive or ride while impaired, take their keys and help them make other arrangements to get to their destination safely.

Wear a seat belt! It is not only the law; it is also the best defense against an impaired driver. Buckling up helps prevent injury and death if you are involved in a crash.

nonprofits and civic organizations can also help.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS IF YOU WORK OUTSIDE

Knowing what workplace protections you have is important. Some states have them, including Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Colorado, Minnesota and Maryland, according to the Natural Resources Defense Council. Other states don't have any.

If your state has work rules, try to learn them — though there are still challenges to ensuring regulations are actually enforced, said Bharat Venkat, director of the University of California, Los Angeles Heat Lab.

He notes that sometimes shaded areas are too far away for workers to take breaks without losing wages, or that management can make it impossible for workers to advocate for themselves. "Most workers don't actually have control over their time or control over where they work," Venkat said.

Within those constraints, finding ways to stay hydrated and lower your body temperature are important. You can do this by drinking lots of fluids, wetting clothing or putting cold water or a cold rag on your hands, feet, armpits and neck. A portable handheld fan or a cooling vest can also help.

If you're exercising, avoid the hottest times of day and bring more water than you think you need.

KNOWING HEAT ILLNESS SYMPTOMS

Heat illness symptoms can vary by person, Venkat said. Medications or existing health conditions can also make it harder to regulate body temperature or notice you're getting too hot.

Early trouble signs include heavy sweating, muscle cramps and headache. That's when you stop what you're doing and cool yourself off, for example by splashing yourself with cold water or finding an air-conditioned space.

As heat exhaustion sets in, new symptoms arrive, including faster heart rate and dizziness. Next comes heat stroke, which can include confusion, slurred words and fainting. Ward said that's when to call 911. "Don't be embarrassed to call 911 or go to urgent care when you think you might have overdone it in the heat," he said.
