

Bradley rejoining Saleh as Titans defensive coordinator

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Gus Bradley is returning to the AFC South and reuniting with Robert Saleh as the Tennessee Titans defensive coordinator. Saleh announced the hire Wednesday as the new Tennessee coach finalized his coordinator selections. Saleh already had added Brian Daboll as offensive coordinator and brought back John “Bones” Fassel as special teams coordinator. Bradley and Saleh had worked together with the San Francisco 49ers this season, as Saleh was defensive coordinator and Bradley the assistant head coach of defense. Saleh left the 49ers to take over as head coach for Tennessee, which is coming off back-to-back 3-14 seasons. That San Francisco team went 12-5 and reached the playoffs despite losing star defensive lineman Nick Bosa and linebacker Fred Warner to season-ending injuries. This move brings Bradley back to the AFC South after he was the Jacksonville Jaguars head coach from 2013-16 and the Indianapolis Colts defensive coordinator from 2022-24. Saleh had been a linebackers coach on Bradley's Jacksonville staff from 2014-16. Saleh and Bradley also worked together in Seattle from 2011-12, with Bradley as defensive coordinator and Saleh as a defensive quality control coach. Bradley went 14-48 as Jacksonville's head coach. Bradley's tenure as Seattle's defensive coordinator lasted from 2009-12. He also was a defensive coordinator with the Los Angeles Chargers (2017-20) and Las Vegas Raiders (2021) as well as with Indianapolis.

Senate approves trauma center bill after impassioned debate

BY LEGISLATIVE RESEARCH COMMISSION

FRANKFORT — A bill that would allow more Kentucky hospitals to be designated as Level IV trauma centers received approval in the Senate on Thursday following impassioned debate on the chamber floor.

Bill sponsor Sen. Stephen Meredith, R-Leitchfield, said

Level IV is the lowest designation of trauma center in Kentucky. The state passed legislation in 2008 to establish a statewide trauma network but never appropriated funding, he said. Senate Bill 12 is seeking to ease some of the legal standards to help grow the network, particularly in rural areas that are struggling with gaps in health care, Meredith said. National standards from the American College of Surgeons allow trauma centers to operate with a mid-level practitioner under the supervision of a physician, but Kentucky's law does not make that distinction, he said.

SB 12 would allow Kentucky Level IV trauma centers to operate if either a physician or an advanced practice provider is supervised by an on- or off-site physician at all times. Meredith said the legislation would align Kentucky with the national standards while providing clear oversight, approved processes, and approved coordination that
