

Adoration in the jungle

My daughter who lives in the country of Panama, belonged to Saint Mary's Parish. She had been thinking a lot about attending Eucharistic Adoration for several months when she finally approached Father John about the possibility of having adoration in their parish of Saint Mary's. He was happy to hear of her interest, but had an even better idea. He asked her if she would be interested in having adoration at a nursing home in the interior of the jungle. Holy smokes! This was more than she bargained for. But isn't that just like Jesus to ask us out of our comfort zone? She left without giving Father John an answer, but, over the next few days, her prayers of worry would be answered. In her car, she put in the CD player a Lighthouse Catholic Media CD that is in most Catholic Churches. The topic was Eucharistic Adoration, and, while she was listening, she saw a bumper sticker with a picture of the Eucharist. She said, "The pull to do this was stronger than ever. Jesus is waiting for us to visit! God wanted me to love Him by loving His people, and I took a deep breath and said OK to God."

Before she knew it, she was traveling down a single lane, dilapidated road and there it was, the open air chapel of Saint Thomas. Flowers, crucifix, ringing of the bell, procession to the altar, reading the Bible, songs and the rosary. The people and the elderly showed up, and all were very excited about all that took place. They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, my daughter's worries were dashed, and she continued this each week.

We are all called to take the message of the presence of Jesus in the Eucharist to everyone! JM/J!

League of Women Voters of Kentucky release second ICE report

SUBMITTED

On May 21, the League of Women Voters of Kentucky released Immigration Detention in Kentucky Jails: Who's in Charge and What to Ask Them.

According to a press release, the report is a guide to help the public understand who makes decisions about their county jails, and suggest questions to not only learn about the conditions for immigrants and other detainees in the jails, but to shine light on a system that could potentially obscure Constitutional violations, such as due process.

The report is the second in a series of reports that the League will issue over the next several months "to bring transparency and accountability to Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) detentions in Kentucky county jails," the release states.

"Kentuckians have a right to know what is happening in publicly-funded jails," said Jennifer A. Jackson, M.D., president of the LWVKY. "Depriving any person of their liberty is a serious matter. Under our Constitution, due process is protected for everyone on U.S. soil. Holding individuals in jail without criminal charges or a trial violates that core right. The League of Women Voters urges Kentuckians to look closely at our facilities and ask the hard questions about operations and funding to ensure immigrants and other detainees are treated humanely, not as a commodity."

The report identifies three groups of local elected officials that Kentuckians can approach to ask about what is happening in their local jails:

- Jailers or corrections department directors: Jailers run the jails in most counties, and can be asked about immigrant detention. In counties without jails, the public can ask the county jailer where immigrants are sent, and then ask questions of administrators of those facilities. In Jefferson and Fayette counties, corrections department directors can be asked these questions.

- Fiscal court or urban council members: In 118 counties, the fiscal court makes important decisions about jails, including approving the budget, deciding whether to hold people from outside the county (including ICE detainees) and what fees to charge for those detentions, and setting rules for how prisoners will be treated. In Jefferson and Fayette counties, city councils have these responsibilities. Kentuckians can ask
