

Yard sale, political and other promotional signs are restricted on right of way

Illegally placed items are subject to removal

Illegally placed items along state-maintained right of way areas are subject to being removed. Political campaigns, residents, business operators and property owners along US and KY routes are reminded no signage is allowed on right of way other than official highway signs and items approved through a permit process. Non-permitted signs can create additional hazards by blocking sight distance or distracting drivers, particularly at intersections. Requests have been received to clear non-permitted signs from right of way areas across the district. With elections and organized yard sale events coming up, anyone wanting to place such signage must do so beyond roadway right of way limits. Along routes with a right of way fence, the fence is included with the restriction and no signage may be attached. In addition to signs, right of way restrictions also apply to yard sales and peddling activities and associated parking. It is also illegal to attach signs or items such as flyers, posters, balloons or streamers to stop signs, highway markers or any other road sign or utility pole. Illegal placement on utility poles presents additional obstacles and potential dangers for utility crew workers. Removed items will be taken to each county's KYTC maintenance facility and held for a short period of time. Unclaimed materials will be trashed or recycled. If you have questions related to legal/illegal sign placement, please get in touch with the Permits Section at KYTC District 4 in Elizabethtown: 270.766.5066.

KYTC District 4 serves Breckinridge, Grayson, Green, Hardin, Hart, LaRue, Marion, Meade, Nelson, Taylor and Washington counties. With nearly 3,000 miles of roadway to maintain, we greatly appreciate cooperation within each community regarding illegally placed items along right of way areas.

Aprils' "Our Healthy Kentucky Home" focuses on teen and young adult health

BY MELISSA PATRICK
KY HEALTH NEWS

The focus of April's "Our Healthy Kentucky Home" initiative is teen and young adult health.

This will be the focus of the initiative, which is in its second year, over the next few months, Health Secretary Dr. Steven Stack said at an April 2 news conference.

Stack said the initiative works to promote simple and attainable goals to help Kentuckians achieve better health, such as eating at least two servings of fruits and vegetables every day, exercising at least 30 minutes three times per week and by engaging with others to stay socially connected. He added that these foundational principles also work for teens as young adults.

"These years are critical for shaping lifelong habits, and by adopting these everyday practices early, folks can create a strong and lasting foundation for their physical, mental and emotional well-being," he said.

Stack said fruits, vegetables, whole grains and lean proteins provide energy, focus and growth during these important developmental years.

"Even small adjustments, like adding a fruit or vegetable to each of your meals, drinking water rather than sugary drinks and choosing snacks like nuts, yogurt, and whole grains can have a helpful benefit and impact over time," he said.

Stack also encouraged teens and young adults to engage in at least 30 minutes of activity three times a week, noting that this can "significantly improve both your physical and mental health."

"The good news is that staying active doesn't have to be complicated or expensive, whether it's playing sports, dancing, walking with friends or taking short movement breaks between classes or screen time, activity can be naturally woven into daily routines," he said.

Stack pointed to school sports, the Kentucky YMCA and Kentucky 4-H as places that provide safe spaces for young people to stay active, while also building confidence and connections.

He also stressed the importance of healthy social connections.

"In today's fast-paced and often digital world, maintaining meaningful connections is more important than ever," Stack said. "Strong social connections help protect mental health, foster resilience and create a sense of well-being. This can be as simple as joining a club or a team, volunteering or checking in on a friend."

Stack pointed to a program that works to help young people grow and build relationships called Kentucky Youth Thrive, for young people aged 9 to 26. He said to go to healthykyhome.ky.gov or email youth.thrive@ky.gov to find an active program near you, or to learn how to activate this program in your community.

And if you are struggling, Stack reminded folks, "It's OK to not be OK." He then pointed to the 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline, which provides free, confidential support, 24 hours a day seven days a week, 365 days a year. The lifeline can be reached by call text or online chat.

"It is an essential resource to ensure no one has to face challenges alone," he said.

"These small, everyday choices add up. When teens and young adults eat better, move more and stay connected, they build resilience that supports them, physically, mentally and emotionally," Stack said. "These habits don't require perfection; they simply require intentional effort and consistency over time."

State's unemployment rate higher than national average

TOM LATEK
KENTUCKY TODAY

Kentucky's annual unemployment rate for 2025 was 4.6 percent, according to the Kentucky Center for Statistics (KYS-TATS), an agency of the Kentucky Education and Labor Cabinet.

This compares to a nationwide average unemployment for last year of 4.3 percent.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' (BLS) estimate of the number of employed Kentuckians for 2025 was 2,018,309. The number of unemployed Kentuckians for 2025 was 97,280. In 2025, the estimated number of Kentuckians in the civilian labor force was 2,115,589.

Labor force statistics, including the unemployment rate, are based on estimates from the Current Population Survey (CPS) of households. The survey is designed to measure trends in the number of people working. It includes jobs in agriculture and individuals who are self-employed.

Kentucky's unemployment rate for 2025 was higher than 39 states, lower than eight states and equal to two states. California had the highest unemployment rate in 2025 at 5.5 percent. South Dakota had the lowest rate at 2.1 percent. Kentucky along with Illinois and Ohio had the highest unemployment rate among its surrounding states.

In a separate federal survey of business establishments that excludes jobs in agriculture and people who are self-employed, Kentucky's nonfarm annual average payroll employment in 2025 decreased by 3,400 or 0.2% to 2,033,100 jobs.

"The business survey suggests that the labor market weakened during 2025," said Mike Clark, director of the University of Kentucky's Center for Business and Economic Research (CBER). "The revised estimates show that employers reduced their average annual payrolls by 3,400 jobs. Job losses occurred across most major sectors but were largest in the manufacturing sector. These losses were partially offset by gains in the private educational and health care services sector and the government sector, which includes public education, public administration agencies and state-owned hospitals."

"Most of the jobs losses for the year occurred in Kentucky's durable goods manufacturing sector," said Clark. "Employment at non-durable goods manufacturers made some initial gains early in the year but lost ground as the year progressed."

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure trends rather than counting the number of people working. Civilian labor force statistics include non-military workers and unemployed Kentuckians who are actively seeking work. They do not include unemployed Kentuckians who have not looked for employment within the past four weeks.
