

Soybean Board is All In for Ag Education Week

The staff and volunteer farmer-leaders of the Kentucky Soybean Board are pleased to join the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, the Kentucky Department of Education, and Lt. Governor Jacqueline Coleman for the 2026 fall All In for Ag Education Week, set for September 21-25!

We've been keeping the UPS man busy shipping educational materials, displays, and promotional items out to our volunteer farmer-leaders, and the staff has done its part as well. We're promoting this educational event on our social media channels, directing public and private school teachers, home-school groups, and parents to the many FREE educational resources that are available. To find lessons, literature, and short videos about soybeans, visit KySoy.org/education and learn how soy touches every life, every day.

For resources that go beyond soy, visit KyAgr.com/Marketing and click on Ag Education Week. There you'll find a school handbook and numerous resources including lesson plans, a list of participating farms and agritourism venues, volunteer speakers by county, and Stories About Ag, where little learners can watch and listen as elected officials and volunteers read age-appropriate stories aloud.

Boxes containing educational resources from many Kentucky agriculture organizations have been sent to more than 700 public schools here in the Commonwealth, and we hope that teachers are as excited about this special week as we are. All In for Ag Education Week runs concurrently with National Farm Safety and Rural Health week, and we can think of no better time to educate about agriculture while encouraging Kentuckians to be safe when they are on the farm. Not only can equipment be dangerous, so can livestock. To further connect All in for Ag Education Week, the official book of the year for this initiative features former State Ag Safety and Rescue instructor Dale Dobson and his dog, Willie B.

Farm Adventures with Willie B. was written by a Murray State University Professor and Agronomist and follows Willie B. and his best buddy Dale as they learn all about farm safety. This is especially poignant for the agriculture community as Dobson, who was a long-term farm safety and grain bin rescue trainer, passed away this summer before the book could be completed.

All in for Ag Education Week is designed to help teachers teach their lessons through the lens of agriculture, not to add more work to their already busy schedule. As Ag Commissioner Jonathan Shell says, math can be taught in bushes and tractor can be a spelling word!

We encourage educators to take advantage of the numerous free resources that are available at KySoy.org/education and KyAgr.com/Marketing. Many of these resources are also available on the Kentucky Soybean and Kentucky Department of Agriculture's Ag Education and Outreach social media channels.

Lindsey Wilson Singers welcome members

DUANE BONIFER
LINDSEY WILSON UNIVERSITY

One of Lindsey Wilson University's biggest families welcomed 16 new members into it on Tuesday, Sept. 15.

The Lindsey Wilson Singers held their annual Standards of Excellence Signing Ceremony on Tuesday night in the historic John B. Begley Chapel, and 16 new members officially joined the university's choral group during the candlelit ritual.

New members heard from five of the 16 returning Singers, and they also signed the group's "Standards of Excellence," in which they pledged to strive for excellence musically and personally during their Lindsey Wilson careers.

"This is a joyous and significant moment in the life of a Lindsey Wilson Singer," said Di-

"Every time we lift our voices, we converge our energy into something that will last forever," said Josephine Posey rector of Choral Activities Jennifer Bersaglia.

Bersaglia reminded the Singers that a commitment to excellence is as much a gift as it is a goal.

"The pursuit of excellence is not an end to itself, but a means to glimpse the Creator in all his beauty and in time reflect that beauty back into the world," she said. "That's what you have the opportunity to do as a Singer each year."

Although Bersaglia spoke to the students and directed them in a couple of songs, the evening was driven by the Singers' veteran members.

"They take ownership of the event because they feel so passionate about making it a special night for the new members," said Bersaglia.

'Something that will last forever'

Three of the Singers' leaders told the new members that the choral group's high standards are based on three long-standing foundational concepts -- energy, intensity and passion.

"Every time we lift our voices, we converge our energy into something that will last forever," said Josephine Posey '27, a human services and counseling major from Greensburg. "You have to draw energy from each other."

The 32 members of the 2026-27 Singers include students from more than a dozen majors and career goals, but Natalie Stearns '28 said "the one thing we all have in common is our drive for success in Singers."

To achieve that success, Stearns, a human services and counseling and psychology double major from Columbia, urged new members "not to see Singers as just a class but as a home."

In addition to the Singers, Tuesday night's ceremony also included several family members and alumni. The strong presence that alumni have in the program, along with strong familial-like bonds that is often forged between fellow Singers, caused Madeline Hardwick '27 to realize she had joined a special group when she was a freshman.

"I learned very quickly in my first year that this group will be something very fundamental, not only in my college experience but also in my life," said Hardwick, an education major from Columbia.

Lindsey Wilson University is a liberal arts university in Columbia. Founded in 1903 and affiliated with The United Methodist Church, the mission of Lindsey Wilson is to serve the educational needs of students by providing a living-learning environment within an atmosphere of active caring and Christian concern where every student, every day, learns and grows and feels like a real human being. LWU offers 30 undergraduate majors, five graduate programs and a doctoral program. The university's 29 intercollegiate varsity athletic teams have won more than 120 team and individual national championships..
