

Reverse Job Fair Empowers Local Students and Strengthens Community Connections

Submitted

The Cave Country Career Expo, a “reverse job fair” hosted at the Cave Area Conference Center in Cave City, brought together students and community leaders for an engaging and impactful workforce development event. The event was made possible through the partnership and sponsorship of the Cave Area Conference Center and Three Corners Employment.

Students from three area high schools—Caverna High School, Hart County High School, and Edmonson County High School—enrolled in the Three Corners Employment program (a Pre-Employment Transition Service Provider), along with Caverna High School’s Jag Program, participated in the event, which featured a unique format that placed students at the center of the hiring experience. Instead of approaching employer booths, students hosted their own tables to present their skills, resumes, and career goals to visiting business professionals and community leaders.

A total of 77 students, 68 business professionals, and community leaders participated (not including school staff or Three Corners Employment team members). The event provided students with hands-on experience in professional communication, self-advocacy, and career readiness.

Several students received job offers, internships, and formal interview requests as a direct result of their participation, while others gained valuable feedback and insight into workforce expectations. The event created an environment where students not only showcased their abilities but also identified areas for continued growth.

Community response was overwhelmingly positive. Many attendees expressed excitement and reached out after the event to share their impressions, noting the professionalism, preparedness, and confidence demonstrated by the participating students. The event generated strong local interest and highlighted the value of collaboration between schools, employers, and community partners.

A highlight of the event was recognizing one outstanding student from each participating school. Students were evaluated based on their overall presentation, preparedness, resume quality, confidence, professional appearance, and demonstrated work readiness. The honorees included:

- Hannah Carter, Junior at Caverna High School
- Chloe Hardin, Freshman at Hart County High School
- Nathaneal Blanton, Senior at Edmonson County High School

“The Reverse Job Fair provided students with a meaningful opportunity to build confidence, make connections, and experience real-world expectations in a supportive environment,” Christy Jennings, Three Corners Employment supervisor at Caverna High School.

“The success of this event reflects the strength of our community and a shared commitment to preparing students for their futures.” Sarah Barker, Three Corners Employment Supervisor at Hart County High School.

The event not only connected students with immediate employment opportunities but also fostered long-term growth, inspiration, and career exploration.
