group and we accept the challenge ahead," Gilgeous-Alexander said. "Every game is going to present a different challenge and obviously when you lose, it hurts a little more and there's a little extra motivation and we tend to fight a little bit harder."

And given that this is Game 7, there will be plenty of fight on both sides.

Gilgeous-Alexander will be in his fourth Game 7. Wembanyama will be in his first. Most of the Spurs' rotation players will be on this stage for only the first or second time. But everyone knows the stakes.

"I think there's been a lot of legendary Game 7s and I feel like we're a group that wants to be a part of that," said Spurs rookie Dylan Harper, whose father — five-time champion Ron Harper — played in a pair of Game 7s. "We want to be a part of that kind of history of Game 7. We're going to go out there swinging. No matter what, we just going to leave it all on the table."
