NFL teams weigh options before trade deadline

BY ROB MAADDI
AP PRO FOOTBALL WRITER

Jeffery Simmons, Quenton Nelson and DeForest Buckner have already been traded. More players will be on the move soon.

With the NFL trade deadline approaching on Nov. 10, several teams still have to determine whether they will be buyers or sellers. The Titans and Colts already made their intentions clear. And, they may not be done yet.

Tennessee got first-round picks in 2027 and in 2028 along with a 2027 fourth from Chicago for All-Pro defensive tackle Simmons and a 2028 fifth-round pick. Running back Tony Pollard, safety Amani Hooker and edge rusher Jermain Johnson could be next to go.

Indianapolis acquired a 2027 third-round pick and a 2028 fifth-round pick from San Francisco for eight-time Pro Bowl guard Nelson. The Colts sent Buckner to San Francisco for a 2027 fourth. Jonathan Taylor could land them a haul. Wide receiver Josh Downs will bring interest.

Here's a look at where some teams stand and players who might be available:

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS

The underachieving Chargers (0-6) are the NFL's only winless team. They need to be sellers, looking to add draft picks. Veteran edge rusher Khalil Mack is still productive, though only a situational player at this point of his career. Veteran cornerback Donte Jackson has value. Wide receiver Quentin Johnston is young enough to be part of a rebuild if the Chargers keep him. Trading franchise quarterback Justin Herbert would be a massive and highly unlikely blockbuster. He has a full no-trade clause and would generate dead cap hits of $31.6 million this year and $50.4 million in 2027. That won't stop folks from speculating.

MIAMI DOLPHINS

The Dolphins (1-5) are heading nowhere and need to add young talent. Defensive tackle Zach Sieler, right tackle Austin Jackson and edge Josh Uche can help them add some picks. Linebacker Jordyn Brooks is coming off an All-Pro season and could be a core player for the future if he stays.

ARIZONA CARDINALS

The Cardinals (2-5) have edge rusher Josh Sweat and safety Budda Baker to place on the open market. Both players are talented and would get a nice haul. Arizona already traded wideout Marvin Harrison Jr. to the Texans. There's a possibility QB Jacoby Brissett could be available, opening a path for rookie Carson Beck to play. Backup QB Gardner Minshew is expendable.

First-year head coach Zach Hardison pointed to his team's relentless mindset after the final whistle.

"Oh, man, we're just fighters, man," Hardison said. "I've said it all year, and it's so much fun to watch them fight, man. They don't ever go away. The other team makes a run—cool, we're going to go get one ourselves—and they just fight, and I just love it, man."

Hardison credited an energetic campus send-off earlier in the day—complete with the school band, cheerleaders, and packed hallways—followed by a sharp afternoon walkthrough that kept the squad locked in.
