Tonight, election coverage, KET forums and more, she interviewed policymakers, community leaders and Kentuckians from across the Commonwealth while exploring issues important to the state. As director of public affairs, she also oversaw expansion of this area for KET, including the nightly Kentucky Edition program.

In her new role, Shaw will lead all of KET's statewide public media services, including its work in classroom educational resources and original programming celebrating Kentucky's history and culture.

"KET has been such an important part of my life, and it is an incredible honor to have the opportunity to lead an organization that means so much to Kentucky," Shaw said in a release announcing her selection. "Throughout my career, I've had the privilege of listening to Kentuckians and sharing their stories. Although we all are dealing with heavy hearts right now after the passing of Shae Hopkins, I look forward to building on the strong foundation she and others helped build and working alongside our talented staff and partners to ensure that KET continues to inform, educate and connect people across the Commonwealth for generations to come."

assistant professor in WKU's Department of Earth, Environmental and Atmospheric Sciences within the WKU Ogden College of Science and Engineering, and the project's principal investigator. "Our goal is to build a system that helps sustain critical operations when the grid is disrupted, while creating opportunities for students to work on real challenges at the intersection of energy, data science and community resilience."

Researchers and students in the DSOC's AI Research (AIR) Lab will use the microgrid as a research platform, developing data and artificial intelligence applications that connect weather, energy use and emergency operations.

The project includes engineering and design, equipment procurement and installation, and testing to evaluate how solar generation, stored energy and backup generators work together.

Tiffany & Co. on the state's credit card, documents say.

"Bogard withdrew cash and charged personal expenses — including personal travel expenses, jewelry, supplements, meals, and Amazon purchases — to State FOP accounts under the false implication they were legitimate State FOP expenses," the charging document reads.

An initial appearance has not been set for Bogard.

According to WCPO, Bogard was a Covington police officer for nearly 20 years. Bogard previously served on the Covington FOP Lodge #1 executive board for more than a decade and held the roles of secretary and president.

Bogard's attorney, Kenneth Andrew Foisy, was not immediately available for comment Thursday morning.
