

Dead Nettle Creek Haunted Trail “Revelation”

“STEP INTO REVELATION. THERE IS NO TURNING BACK.”

By Lisa Sullivan
COMMUNITY NEWS

That ominous invitation awaits visitors to Deadnettle Creek’s Haunted Trail, where frightening scenes inspired by the Book of Revelation will bring biblical prophecy to life this Halloween season.

Located at 971 Forge Mill Road in Dunmore, the attraction invites thrill-seekers to enter a world of supernatural encounters, apocalyptic imagery and dramatic scenes inspired by the final book of the Bible. Through carefully designed settings, unsettling sounds and eerie effects, the trail combines traditional haunted-trail thrills with imagery drawn from biblical prophecy.

For owners Kiera and Daniel Elitzer, the attraction offers more than a seasonal scare. Now in its third year, Deadnettle Creek’s Haunted Trail began as an effort to give local families a place to celebrate Halloween without traveling long distances to find a haunted attraction.

“Our county and the surrounding communities had stopped doing haunted trails,” Kiara said. “People were having to travel anywhere from an hour to an hour and a half for a haunted trail.”

The disappearance of local Halloween attractions, combined with the lingering effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on entertainment venues throughout the region, helped inspire the couple to create an experience closer to home for families and thrill-seekers.

Situated on an 80-acre farm in Dunmore, the trail has developed into an annual Halloween attraction. This year, the owners chose a theme rooted in the Book of Revelation, giving visitors an experience built around some of the Bible’s most dramatic and recognizable imagery. The trail will feature seven scenes that contribute to the larger experience. Among its featured elements are the Four Horsemen of Revelation, bringing one of the book’s best-known images to life.

Fog, sound machines, bells and curtains help transform the trail into a series of unsettling environments. As visitors move from one scene to the next, visual effects and carefully arranged settings are designed to build suspense and create an immersive atmosphere.

The Revelation theme also gives the attraction a message beyond its frightening displays, distinguishing it from haunted experiences focused primarily on monsters, costumes and jump scares. The scenes draw from biblical symbolism while maintaining the suspense and surprises expected of a Halloween haunted
