Buffalo Bills offensive coordinator Joe Brady, seen in August of 2025, is being promoted to head coach to replace Sean McDermott, according to multiple reports.

Report: Bills promoting Brady to head coach

Field Level Media

The Buffalo Bills are promoting offensive coordinator Joe Brady to head coach with a five-year contract, ESPN reported Tuesday.

Brady, 36, replaces Sean McDermott, who was fired last week after compiling a 98-50 record over nine seasons but failing to reach the Super Bowl.

Brady spent the past four seasons on McDermott's staff. He was Josh Allen's quarterbacks coach in 2022 and 2023 and added interim offensive coordinator duties in November 2023 after the firing of Ken Dorsey. He was promoted to the full-time job in 2024.

Brady had several other suitors during the current coaching cycle, including the Arizona Cardinals, Baltimore Ravens and Las Vegas Raiders.

As for the Bills, they also interviewed former Giants head coach Brian Daboll, Jacksonville Jaguars offensive coordinator Grant Udinski, Los Angeles Rams pass game coordinator Nate Scheel-haase, Denver Broncos pass game coordinator and quarterbacks coach Davis Webb, Washington Commanders run game coordinator Anthony Lynn, Miami Dolphins defensive coordinator Anthony Weaver, Indianapolis Colts DC Lou Anarumo and Colts quarterback Philip Rivers.

In 2025, Brady's Buffalo offense ranked fourth in the NFL in yards (376.3 per game) and points (28.3).

Brady first grabbed headlines in 2019 as the passing game coordinator and wide receivers coach during LSU's 15-0 run to the national championship. He won the Broyles Award as the top assistant in college football for his work with quarterback Joe Burrow and wide receivers Ja'Marr Chase and Justin Jefferson.

Brady was the offensive coordinator for the Carolina Panthers from 2020-21.

Brady will become the youngest active NFL head coach, replacing Kellen Moore, 37, of the New Orleans Saints.
