DeChambeau among former LIV golfers headed for DP World Tour

Field Level Media

Bryson DeChambeau will play on the DP World Tour in the 2027 season, a bridge between the shuttered LIV Golf circuit and a potential return to the PGA Tour.

On Tuesday, the European-based tour released a list of players confirmed for the season and their membership levels – a list dotted with ex-LIV competitors.

As the winner of a major championship since 2022, DeChambeau was granted what the tour calls a "Category One membership" – a level that guarantees him entry to every event.

Also in that category is Jon Rahm, a Spaniard who began play on the DP World Tour in 2016 and has 11 wins on the circuit.

It is expected that players who left the PGA Tour for LIV will be required to serve a one-year suspension before the Tour will reinstate their memberships, The Telegraph reported Tuesday morning.

LIV Golf announced last week that it was shutting down operations after failing to procure the necessary financing to continue without support from Saudi Arabia's Public Investment Fund.

Speaking Monday, PGA Tour CEO Brian Rolapp remained firm that he would not discuss the playing futures of former LIV players as that league goes through the bankruptcy process.

Until then, the DP Word Tour has offered several ex-LIV members a place to play in 2027. They include Dustin Johnson, Cameron Smith and Bubba Watson, who signed agreements to receive invitations to a "specific number of tournaments next season."

Other players in that category are Abraham Ancer, Lucas Herbert, Michael La Sasso, Joaquin Niemann, Carlos Ortiz and Thomas Pieters.

The DP World Tour could have one of its "most keenly contested campaigns in our 55-year history," Guy Kinnings, the tour's CEO, said in a news release on Tuesday.

"There has been significant change in the landscape of men's professional golf over the past 12 months. As golf's global Tour, we have taken a pragmatic approach to this unique and unprecedented situation as we go into next year, always with the best interests of our entire membership at the forefront of our minds," he said.

"We realise there are different viewpoints but this approach, discussed and agreed with our Tournament Committee and allied to this responsibly managed programme of invites, will add value which, in turn, will benefit the Tour as a whole."

Also among the former LIV players on the 199-member DP World Tour roster for 2027 are Tyrrell Hatton, Sergio Garcia, Lee Westwood, Louis Oosthuizen, Martin Kaymer, David Puig and Ian Poulter.

The 2027 season will begin Nov. 26 with the BMW Australian PGA Championship in Sydney.

The Telegraph reported that DeChambeau is expected to play in the Nedbank Golf Challenge in Sun City, South Africa, from Dec. 3-6 and then the Hero Dubai Desert Classic from Jan. 21-24.
