An injured New York Yankees' Aaron Judge looks on from the dugout during Tuesday's game against Detroit Tigers.

Aaron Judge still waiting for more scans

NEW YORK — Aaron Judge is approaching four weeks since going on the injured list with a stress fracture of his right rib, but the New York Yankees captain has yet to have updated scans.

"I've got nothing for you," Judge said Wednesday before the Yankees faced the Tigers. "You know how it goes around here — guys can feel good, feel bad, but you've got to wait on images. I'll give you a good update when we get some imaging."

The three-time AL MVP has not played since May 31 and went on the injured list June 5 after a CT scan, an MRI and a meeting with a specialist.

When the Yankees put Judge on the IL, they said he would have limited activity before getting re-evaluated and having additional imaging in four to six weeks.

"There's no need to talk about this now," Judge said. "I know it's an important topic and a big issue, but I want to give you guys the full story."

The Yankees began Wednesday 12-14 without Judge, who is hitting .248 with 17 homers and 38 RBIs. Judge had one homer in his final 18 games before getting sidelined and ended an 11-game homer and RBI drought with a game-ending, two-run drive on May 24 against the Tampa Bay Rays.

New York won nine of its first 13 games without Judge but entered Wednesday hitting .127 during a six-game losing streak.

"It's not great," Judge said. "It's a little lack of focus. We got to dial it in."

Including a stint on the COVID-19 injured list in July 2021, Judge is on the IL for the 10th time since debuting on Aug. 13, 2016. He missed 45 games with a fractured right wrist in 2018, 54 games with a strained left oblique in 2019 and 42 games with a fractured toe in 2023 after crashing into a wall while making a catch at Dodger Stadium.

Fried faces hitters in simulated game

NEW YORK — New York Yankees starting pitcher Max Fried took another step in his recovery from a bone bruise in his left elbow, throwing about 30 pitches in a two-inning simulated game Tuesday.

Fried was on the mound for about 20 minutes and used all his pitches while facing Ryan McMahon and Trent Grisham, who are slated to be activated off the injured list Friday.

"It looked great, like really good," manager Aaron Boone said before the Yankees faced Detroit. "Stuff was good. I thought he was really sharp."

Fried recently started throwing bullpen sessions and will face hitters again before Sunday's game against the Minnesota Twins.

The 32-year-old left-hander has been out since May 13, when he left a start in Baltimore after three innings when he velocity noticeably dropped and he threw only 34 of 61 pitches for strikes. He also had an MRI and CT scan that were reviewed by Los Angeles Dodgers team physician Dr. Neal ElAttrache.

McMahon, who is recovering from a throat infection, faced Fried three times. He popped out and struck out in the first two at-bats before seeing three more pitches in the final at-bat when Fried's session ended.

"All over the zone," McMahon said. "He threw every pitched, landed the curveball and sweeper for strikes to me and the sinkers were nasty. Everything was good."

Grisham, who is recovering from a strained right hamstring, saw about 10 pitches from Fried and struck out in his first appearance while fouling off a pair of pitches.

Fried did not face Giancarlo Stanton, who is recovering from a strained right calf that has kept him out since April 24. Boone said Monday that Stanton was going to face Fried, but Tuesday said he misspoke.

Fried is 4-3 with a 3.21 ERA in 10 starts after going 19-5 with a 2.86 ERA and making the All-Star team last season, his first with the Yankees. He left Atlanta as a free agent to sign a $218 million, eight-year contract with New York in December 2024.
