Hollis interested in Michigan State job after Kentucky hires J Batt

BY LARRY LAGE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michigan State has lost its president and athletic director weeks apart and now faces a leadership crisis. President Kevin M. Guskiewicz announced he'd be leaving for Clemson at the end of May, and athletic director J Batt was hired away by Kentucky on Monday.

Michigan State basketball coach Tom Izzo, who has worked under many athletic directors and school presidents since he took over the program in 1995, lamented that Guskiewicz and Batt decided to leave.

"I am very upset about it, and I'm sick of it," Izzo told reporters. "I think 600,000 living alumni better start rallying together."

At least one of those alumni is on the same page. Mark Hollis, the school's former athletic director who brought the Spartans to new heights before a fall from public esteem during the Larry Nassar case, told The Associated Press he would want to return to his alma mater.

"I would be interested in talking to Michigan State about it," Hollis said at Detroit Golf Club, where he was serving in his role
