

Fall continues basketball career at Simmons College

HEBRON ESTATES – Mahijah Fall is one of those players who has tremendous upside to her game.

The senior who recently graduated from North Bullitt High School signed with Simmons College of Kentucky to continue her basketball career.

But if it wasn't for her parents, Mamadou and Marsneria Fall, she may have never stepped on the court.

It was in the eighth grade that her parents made her take up the game.

"Then, I stuck with it because I fell in love," Fall said of the game.

She was a varsity player who saw her role grow over the four years. In her senior year, Fall was honored for getting her 500th rebound.

In looking at college options, which included Union Commonwealth University and Defiance College, she felt Simmons was the place for her.

"It has a strong education program and I close to home," said Fall. "It is also a very nice community."

Fall became familiar with the program after Simmons coaches contacted her coach Chris Downey, who she thanked for having a big influence on her life.

She believes that she will be able to compete for playing time in her freshman year.

Besides her parents, her siblings Bamba Fall (13) and Sidy Fall (10) will be there to cheer her on.

Adams continues baseball career at Lake Michigan College

MOUNT WASHINGTON – He fell in love with the game of baseball at an early age.

And, Kadin Adams will now have the opportunity to continue his career at Lake Michigan College.

The son of Brian and Whitney Adams will attend the college after a solid career at Bullitt East High, a team which advanced to the state tournament this season.

He started playing baseball at the age of 3 and began his travel ball career when he turned eight.

Adams looked at Lindsey Wilson University and Schoolcraft before making his final decision.

"It was a very nice campus, all turf field and will give me a chance to prove myself," Adams said of Lake Michigan, which also impressed him academically.

His hitting coach contacted the school and Adams made a visit last December. Cheered on by siblings Channing, Cruz and Kash, Adams credited his father with getting him to the current point in his career.

He believes baseball will serve him well throughout life. In talking with the coaches, if he puts in the work, he believes he can see the field as a freshman.

Over the course of his high school career, Adams said the best memory was a walk-off for the victory in Vero Beach during the spring break trip last year.

seasons maturing from a skinny teenager into one of the top players on the planet.

Bucks coach Taylor Jenkins understood this was a possibility when he accepted the job in April following the departure of Doc Rivers.

"Naturally, we did talk about Gianni, the entire roster, developmental pathways for everyone you know, moving forward," Jenkins said during his introductory news conference last month. "Because from the coaching lens, I've got to start formulating that, what we're going to do, not just this offseason, but when we hit the ground running, you know, at the start of training camp. So naturally, (we) talked about that. Had great dialogue, full transparency."

REPLACING A BELOVED SUPERSTAR Antetokounmpo had spent his entire career with the Bucks, who selected the 18-year-old from Greece with the 15th pick in the 2013 draft. The nine-time all-NBA forward leads the Bucks in virtually every career statistical category, including points, rebounds, assists, blocks, games and minutes.
