although a major cannot be declared until the second year of university. In his first year, he also plans to explore topics in Physics to further expand upon his fascination with fundamental understanding of our universe, considering only this subject as a possible substitute to Mathematics.

After university, Mauricio says that he plans to eventually pursue a doctorate, and become a professor. "I really love the beauty and ordered structure of mathematics. I can think of no better career than to study its intricacies from its most fundamental form," said Mauricio.

Mauricio says that he knew he wanted to study at a university where he could not only explore his passions, but be surrounded by people with whom he may debate, learn, and even let loose on occasion. What better place than Princeton University?

Stats on the Process/Technical Details:

- 3.97 UW GPA
- 35 ACT
- Significant Clubs/ECs - Calculus Club: Teaches Calculus to peers and really tries to engage students who lacked opportunities to learn Calculus in high school such as himself.

Mauricio knew that the only place he wanted to go was Princeton, so he applied under a "Restrictive Early Action, meaning that he could not apply to another private institution throughout the early admissions cycle.

Mauricio's Full-Ride to Princeton includes $68,000 tuition and $27,000 housing.
