

WOLFORD,

actual theater or venue in which to perform—some troupes error on the side of caution by producing “safe” shows, perhaps a musical, a Disney favorite, or a tried and true classic.

From its inception, Flashback Theater Co., in neighboring Pulaski County, has always been cutting edge, willing to take chances.

Under the bright and brilliant artistic direction of Sommer Winstead, the theater began small, but soon developed a large following and tremendous “buzz.”

Flashback has delighted patrons of the arts with original plays and performances, (risky tasks for a community theater), and now brings us the rollicking and rocking “Fleetwood Macbeth.”

This is not a play simply chosen from a theatrical licensing company, it’s a brave and bold choice.

Described as a “musical parody,” the clever twist on a Shakespeare staple is the brainchild of Ricky W. Glore, a nationally touring stand-up comedian, and award-winning film director.

Flashback could not have picked a better cast.

With Russell County’s own Erin Wolford in the role of “Lady,” area favorite Greg Blair as “Mac,” the entire ensemble pour themselves into their roles.

No stranger to the local stage, Wolford is simply outstanding.

Known to many as a “mild mannered” librarian in real life, she breathes fire into her character with both solid acting and singing skills.

When the spotlight is on her, she owns the stage.

A live band on stage creates a fluid atmosphere as the production builds to an almost Lynchian-like ending.

With familiar music from the rock legends Fleetwood Mac, the overall feeling is fun and festive—even with dark subject matter, and a few curse words. (It’s 2026, people...)

For those seeking an exciting, inspiring evening, Flashback’s production of “Fleetwood Macbeth” is a must.

Concurrent Enrollment Agreement Creates Faster Pathway to Bachelor’s Degree for Nursing Students Somerset Community College nursing students can begin Lindsey Wilson bachelor’s degree early through new agreement

by Venus Popplewell

Lindsey Wilson University and Somerset Community College are expanding opportunities for registered nurses to seamlessly continue their education and earn a bachelor’s degree in nursing.

The two schools took part in an agreement signing on Monday, May 11, to establish a pathway that will allow nursing students to enroll concurrently at both institutions.

Nursing students enrolled in the final semester of the associate degree in nursing at Somerset Community College may apply for admission to Lindsey Wilson University through the concurrent enrollment pathway. Eligible students will enroll in their first bachelor’s degree course, Transition to Professional Nursing Practice, at Lindsey Wilson. Credit hours earned in the course will apply toward a bachelor of science in nursing at Lindsey Wilson University.

“SCC’s partnership with Lindsey Wilson University creates a seamless pathway for SCC nursing students to earn a four-year degree while helping meet Kentucky’s growing healthcare workforce needs,” said Dr. Carey Castle, president and CEO of Somerset Community College.

According to Tommie Saragas, Lindsey Wilson Assistant Vice President of Educational Outreach, the agreement is the first of its kind between the two schools, which have been partners in education for more than two decades.

“We are creating an early-acceptance bridge program for ADN students in their final semester at Somerset Community College,” said Saragas. “Through this partnership, nursing students can begin Lindsey Wilson coursework while completing their associate degree, allowing them to transition seamlessly into our online bachelor’s program without interrupting their education. It also gives students an opportunity to build relationships with Lindsey Wilson faculty, become familiar with our coursework and connect with their future cohort before fully entering the program.”

Lindsey Wilson Director of Nursing Emiley Button says LWU’s nursing program is designed with the busy lifestyle of a working nurse in mind.

“The RN BSN transitional course is offered every fall and spring semester,” said Button. “That’s important because you will never have to sit out a semester. You can start regardless of when your final semester

Also notable, the RN BSN program is offered fully online and financial aid is available to qualifying students.

“Lindsey Wilson’s nursing program is taught by nurses who have real-world experience working in hospitals, doctor’s offices and nursing homes,” said Button. “We know how hard it is to work and go to school, and for many of us - manage a family. We kept that top of mind as we put this program together.”

Korey Bruck, Director of the University Center of Southern Kentucky, echoed the benefits of the agreement, noting the opportunities it will create for nursing students.

“This innovative agreement reflects our shared commitment to keeping highly skilled, compassionate nurses in southcentral Kentucky,” said Bruck, who oversees the transfer center. “We are excited to help our students accelerate through our program and get a jump-start into Lindsey Wilson. This is step one of many that I foresee moving forward.

We are excited about this and thankful for the continued partnership with Lindsey Wilson University.”
