By virtue of a In Rem Judgment and Order of Sale in Case No. 21-CI-00046 in Hickman Circuit Court, entered November 6, 2025 I shall proceed to offer for sale at the Courthouse door in Clinton, Hickman County, Kentucky, to the highest bidder at public auction on the 26th day of January, 2026, at the hour of 2:00 p.m., the following described property:

Property Address: 1738 Hodge Road, Clinton, KY 42031
PVA Map # 057-00-00-037.00

For greater certainty see the following deeds: Deed Book 74, page 53, and Deed Book 74, Page 51 and Donie Elizabeth Jackson died January 3, 1994, all records of the Hickman County Court Clerk.

The property will be sold under the following terms and conditions:

1. At the time of sale the successful bidder shall either pay full cash or make a deposit of ten (10%) per cent of the purchase price with the balance on credit for 30 days. If the purchase price is not paid in full, the successful bidder shall execute a bond at the time of sale with sufficient surety approved by the master commissioner two (2) days prior to the sale to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price. The bond shall bear interest at the rate of 12% from the date of sale until paid. In the event the successful bidder is the plaintiff, then in lieu of the deposit the plaintiff shall be allowed to bid on credit up to the judgment amount.

2. The bond shall have the same force and effect as a Judgment and shall remain, and be a lien on the real property sold as additional security for the payment of the purchase price until the purchase price, plus interest and costs, are full paid. On executions issued upon them no replevy shall be allowed, and sales shall be for cash.

3. The property shall be sold free and clear of the claims of the parties to this action, but it shall be sold subject to the following:

a. All current year (2026) ad valorem real estate taxes not yet due and payable and all taxes due thereafter. Buyer shall pay 2026 ad valorem taxes.

b. Easements, restrictions and stipulations of record affecting the Real Property.

c. Any assessments for public improvements properly levied against the Real Property.

d. Any matters which would be disclosed by an accurate survey or inspection of the Real Property.

e. Any right of redemption that may exist in favor of the Defendants.

4. The Master Commissioner will retain a lien on said property to secure payment of said bond, if issued.

This Sale may be cancelled, and any announcements made at the sale take precedence over printed matter contained herein.

The undersigned commissioner does not have access to the inside of the above-mentioned property.

Dated this 5th day of January, 2026.

A long overdue pilgrimage to the London bookshop that inspired a famous romance on the silver screen

By BERRY CRAIG

Many of my friends say I learn toward the curmudgeonly side. I plead guilty. But I also confess to having a sentimental side. I'm a sucker for romantic comedies.

"Notting Hill," starring Hugh Grant and Julia Roberts, is one of my favorite rom coms. Melinda and I saw it on the big screen shortly after it came out in 1999. I've viewed the film at home on TV several times since. I can almost lip sync it. The movie largely centers on the fictitious "Travel Book Company," a little shop in London's Notting Hill neighborhood. Melinda and I have visited Britain's capital city more than a few times. But last summer, I decided it was past time for a pilgrimage to Notting Hill. Melinda, who never met a bookstore she didn't like, readily agreed.

There's a real "Notting Hill Bookshop." But it's not where bookseller William Thacker (Grant) is first wowed by famous American actress Anna Scott (Roberts) when she comes in to browse.

A familiar London "blue plaque" on the storefront explains "The Travel Book Co featured in the film NOTTING HILL was inspired by a bookshop established on this site in 1981. The original interior and shop front remain today."

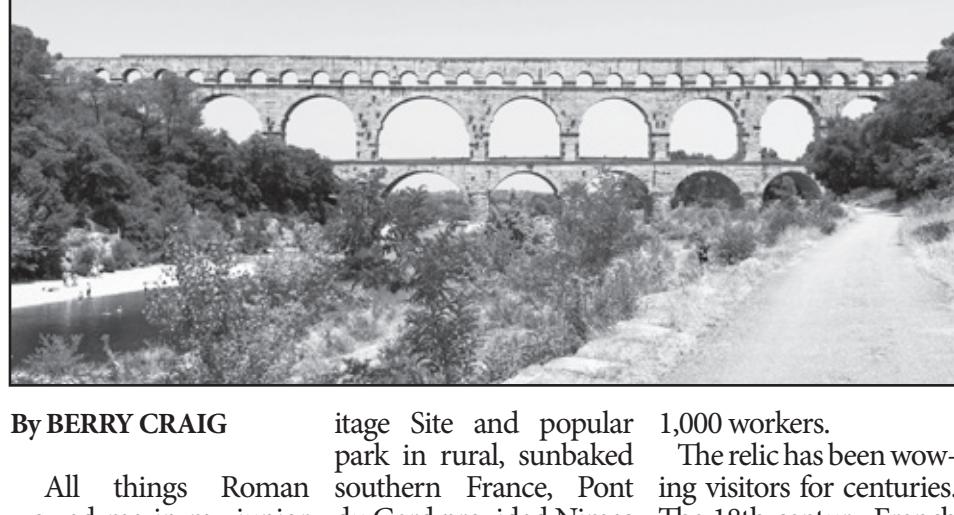

The shop is at 13 Blenheim Crescent. Look for the blue sign and the pair of blue front doors. The one on the right with "13" printed on the transom is the entrance.

'I felt myself lost like an insect in that immensity'

By BERRY CRAIG

All things Roman wowed me in my junior high social studies class.

Aqueducts particularly intrigued me. I remember a black-and-white photo of the mighty Pont du Gard, built in the first century CE—or AD if you prefer—to supply water to Nemausus, a Roman colony in what was then southern Gaul. Gaul became France, and Nemausus is Nimes today.

It was a double-wow seeing the aqueduct in person last summer.

A UNESCO World Heritage Site and popular park in rural, sunbaked southern France, Pont du Gard provided Nimes almost nine million imperial gallons of water daily. It took 27 hours for the water to run from its source to Nimes, a circuitous 31-mile route.

The aqueduct is named for the River Gau, which it spans. It includes three tiers of arches, towers 160 feet above the river and stretches 902 feet from end to end.

Emperor Caesar Augustus's son-in-law oversaw the construction of the aqueduct, which took 15 years and a crew of 800 to 1,000 workers.

The relic has been wowing visitors for centuries. The 18th century French philosopher Jean-Jacques Rousseau declared, "Only the Romans could have produced such an effect. I felt myself lost like an insect in that immensity." He added with a sigh, "Why was I not born a Roman!"

The American writer Henry James marveled, "The lonely valley seemed to fill itself with the shadow of the Roman name, as if the mighty empire were still as erect as the supports of the aqueduct."
